He Worked So He Knows Do You Bet? Then Read Bad Example, Perhaps "Big Business" Not Too Big

—By Arthur Brisbane—

HENRY PHIPPS will spend three and a half of his many millions on a working girls' hotel. From $10 to $14 a week will pay for a good room and seven substantial meals.

MR. PHIPPS knows what his children can never know, the meaning of hard work and poverty.

After working 11 hours a day in a little Ohio store, he walked four miles and back to earn $1 a week extra, keeping books for a blacksmith and wheelwright. Later he and the blacksmith entered business in a small way, with Andrew Carnegie as partner. It paid.

FEDERAL income tax officials investigating "hand bookmakers" discover a bookmaker who deposits between $16,000,000 and $19,000,000 a year in Cincinnati banks.

A bookmaker can deposit only what the little betting fools lose. Let them think it over.

DAYTON, Tennessee, where Professor Scopes is formally indicted for teaching Darwin's doctrine of evolution, objects, properly, to being called "Monkeyville."

Judge Ralston, charging the grand jury that indicted Professor Scopes, says the professor set a bad example before the young in breaking the law. That's true, but everything is comparative. You can say the same of gentlemen that threw the tea overboard in Boston harbor, or men that insisted on teaching that the earth is round and goes around the sun. It was once against the law to teach that doctrine and you could be burned alive for teaching it.

WE TALK of American "big business," and, compared with the past, it is big.

In some ways, however, we are small, and, strange as it may sound to the rampant radical, we are too small even in some of our business enterprises.

You understand the folly of talking about "limiting the size of industrial undertakings," when you realize that, competing with Europe, we compete with industrial units organized on a scale as big as the NATIONS THEMSELVES.

CONSIDER the rubber combination in Britain. They have there a perfect trust, making our so-called "giant trusts" seem like toddling babies.

England controls the rubber business, and financiers say that one business alone can be arranged so as to squeeze out of the United States almost enough money to pay what England owes the United States.

BY RESTRICTING production, putting up prices, the British rubber owners will get from the United States in 1925 four hundred million dollars, against one hundred and eighty-five million dollars in 1924. Thus, by "good management," our British cousins this year will make us pay $215,000,000 extra for rubber.

WE HAVE no right to COMPLAIN of that. It's our business to DO something for ourselves.

Henry Ford has started rubber production experiments in Florida. That may help to solve the problem. Meanwhile nobody will grudge the British their profit. They know how to get hold of rubber at the source, just as they know how to control the long-fibre cotton in Egypt. An able business man or nation is entitled to his or its reward. Our business is to think and work, not grumble.

SEA GUARD CATCHES SPEED BOAT NAPPING, BUT CREW ESCAPES

Plymouth, May 27.—The bullet-type motorboat Peg II, as saucy a craft as ever snickered in the faces of the liquor moppers off shore, was trapped with 600 cases of liquor today after a pursuit of a year.

Capt. John J. Glynn of the North Scituate Coast Guard Station came accidently on the saucy rum runner during the blackness of the night as she was swinging in shallow water off Billings Gate Shoals.

Before her two twelve-cylinder engines could be turned over and she could "get her legs under her," the Peg II was a captive. Her crew escaped, but 600 cases of choice rye, Scotch, gin and champagne were seized in stacks.

The Peg II has been a pest thorn in the side of the sea-going drys for more than a year.

Equipped with two engines that gave her 1,200 horse-power, the Peg II flipped her heels at a forty-seven-miles-per-hour clip that left all rum chasers hopelessly in the van.

On one occasion a fast sea sled was used by the pursuers in an endeavor to head off the Peg II, but she squatted lower and lower in the water and merely tore off faster-knots and miles, leaving the sea sled far behind.

It is believed the rum runners had been tinkering with the engines in the shallow water, as she never has allowed herself to be trapped in a bad place before.

RAILROAD MAN GONE; LEAVES POLICE NOTE

The police of three cities joined hands today in an attempt to solve a mystery having to do with the vanishing of Donald E. Douglas, well-known railroad man of Beverly.

Sending some of his effects to the Boston and Lynn police by messenger boy, Douglas dropped out of sight today in as strange a fashion as the police ever have been confronted with.

Hospitals and other places of assistance and refuge in Lynn, Beverly and Boston are being searched in an attempt to locate him.

Early today a uniformed messenger boy delivered to Boston police headquarters a message which addressed to "Boston Police," said:

"I left a note with the police at Lynn, also a pawn ticket. Here is a pass book. You will have to see the cops at Lynn for further dope."

The note was unsigned, but the employe's pass book on the road bore the name of Douglas, with the notation that in case of accident or death, his father-in-law, Charles B. Hyman of No. 18 Odell avenue, Beverly, should be notified.

Immediately the Boston police communicated with the Lynn authorities and were told the Lynn police had received a note also, enclosing a ticket with which Douglas' watch was redeemed from a Lynn shop.

Then Douglas' wife was communicated with at her father's home. She said Douglas left home for work yesterday and called up at 8 o'clock last night to say he would be home in half an hour. He did not appear.

The missing man is thirty years old, five feet seven inches tall, weighs 155 pounds and has a medium complexion. He wore a blue suit, light cap and tan shoes.

LINEMAN IN PEABODY ELECTROCUTED ON POLE

Peabody, May 27.—George Pierce, twenty-nine, a lineman employed by the City Electrical Department, was electrocuted today when he came in contact with a high voltage wire on a pole to which he was strapped while making some repairs at Tremont and Wallis streets.

Edward Rollins, a fellow workman, cut the strap and brought Pierce to the ground. He was taken to the hospital, but life was extinct. He lived at No. 29 Bowditch street with wife and five children from two to nine years of age.

CROWD TRIES TO GET AT KIRBY AS HE LEAVES COURT

Winthrop, Me., May 27.—The voice of the mob, which has been muttering ominously since the killing of Aida Hayward and the shooting of her aunt, Mrs. Emma M. Towns, broke into a roar today when Harry A. Kirby was brought out of the Town Hall, where he had been arraigned.

As Kirby, who had pleaded not guilty to charges of murder, attempted murder and arson, made his appearance in custody of officers, the crowd that filled Monument square surged threateningly toward him.

Shouts of "There is it!" "There's the dirty rat!" "Kill him!" were heard, and the prisoner, weak from a hunger strike of two days, shrunk back to the deputy sheriffs who were conducting him to an automobile.

Before the heavily armed State police stationed in the square could reach the spot, High Sheriff Cummings took command of the situation.

Mounting the steps leading from the side door of the Town Hall, Sheriff Cummings proclaimed:

"Now men," he cried, "Now men."

That was all.

The conservative sheriff of Kennebec County regained the mastery, and the crowd broke and Kirby was hustled into a car to be taken back to Augusta.

In court he appeared calm, although pale from the self-imposed fast undertaken after his arrival at Augusta from Portland, following his arrest in Newburyport, Mass. On the morning of his arrival at the jail in Augusta Kirby ate one ham sandwich, but since that time has tasted no food.

Today, when informed he was to be taken to Winthrop for arraignment, the man drank water copiously and then announced he was ready.

On reaching the Town Hall, where

POLICE AT GUN POINT SEIZE 3 IN BURGLARY

Acting on information received by Chief Inspector John R. McGarr, five Boston inspectors and Chief of Police Macauley of Woburn, with drawn guns, early today rounded up three men at the Morse farm, Kearsarge avenue, Woburn.

The officers recovered $5,000 worth of English cloth which they say was stolen on May 10 from the tailor shop of Percy DeCourcey, Inc., No. 8 Bosworth place.

The three men, who were arraigned in Municipal Court charged with breaking and entering the tailor shop and with larceny, gave their names as John J. Mahoney, alias Fallon, of No. 86 Wendell street, Cambridge; Joseph (Dutch) Foley, South Boston, and William Corcoran, No. 70 Telegraph street, South Boston.

Chief McGarr planned to line them up at headquarters in an attempt to have the prisoners identified as the men who on Saturday held up and robbed Fred E. Lowell at the South Station, firing three shots at

GATES-STOESSEL BOUT CALLED OFF

The ten-round bout between Jack Gates, Indian heavyweight, and Sea Stossal of New York, which was billed to be staged by the Famous A. C. tomorrow night, was called off at noon today.

Matchmaker Major Lynch said that Ed Garvey, former Notre Dame football star, who was to have fought on the same card, suffered an injury while working out with Tom Gibbons and that Bill Foley, another boxer billed to appear, received a gash under an eye during a gym workout.

The advance sale for this show was also poor, which was another reason why the bouts were called off.

The Mahoney-Sharkey tussle, billed for June 5 under direction of the Crosscup-Pishon Post of the American Legion, has overshadowed all other Hub offerings.

PORTUGUESE CONSULATE CHANGES DENIED HERE

In the face of a cable from Lisbon, Portugal, that the Portuguese government announced today it would close its consulates at Providence, Fall River and New Bedford, replacing them with vice-consulates, Francisco de Paula Brito, Jr., acting consul in Boston, denied this morning that any such instruction had been received from his government.

The Boston consulate, headquarters for New England, he said, necessarily would be the first to be notified and if any such change was contemplated, he had received no word yet to this effect.

KIRBY BACK IN JAIL; HELD FOR GRAND JURY

Accused Man Faces Further Grilling on Other Crimes Laid to Him

the judicial proceedings were held, he manifested an impersonal curiosity in what was going on. The proceedings were quite brief.

"I understand, Mr. Kirby," said Judge Herbert E. Foster, "that you waive reading of these warrants and enter a plea of not guilty?"

"Yes, sir," the prisoner replied.

"Having pleaded not guilty," the court continued, "and waived hearing the complaints, probable cause is found and under our Constitution. The offence with which you are charged is not bailable. I remand you in custody of the sheriff of the county of Kennebec and the keeper of the jail until you are discharged by law, and without bail.

"You waive hearing and reading, both?"

"Yes, sir," said Kirby.

COURT HELD ON STAGE.

Judge Foster presided on the stage where last night a playlet entitled "Putting It Over" was presented.

Kirby's return to the scene of the crimes which aroused the entire countryside was as dramatic as anything conceived by the most sensation-loving playwright.

Fearful that the authorities might slip quietly into town with their prisoner, obtain his commitment to an insane hospital, which rumor had it they planned to do, and slip out again, the leading spirits of Winthrop made careful plans.

All night long men lay in the brush along the road from Augusta, armed with rifles and shotguns, ready to take summary vengeance if they found that Kirby was cheating the law, as they called it.

At the same time plans had been made to blow the whistle of one of the local factories to announce to the community that Kirby had arrived.

FLOCK TO TOWN HALL.

Throughout the night the vigil was unrewarded, and daylight found little groups of men standing in the square discussing the situation.

By eight o'clock two score persons had gathered outside the locked doors of the Town Hall, in which seats for 600 persons were arranged, following the presentation of last night's playlet.

Judge Foster was up early and by shortly after nine o'clock plans were completed for the arraignment of the defendant. The original intention had been to hold the proceedings in the local courthouse, but following a conference between the Selectmen, Judge Foster and County Attorney Frank E. Southard, the Town Hall was decided on because of the crowd expected.

STAGE SET FOR COURT.

The stage was arranged with a table, covered with oil cloth manufactured by the town's leading factory, in the center for Judge Foster, two settees for witnesses and officials and chairs for the prisoner and guards. In front of the stage were tables for the newspapermen.

In the meantime, as a result of a telephone conversation between the Police and Governor Brewster, members of the State highway police were taking up positions along the road from Augusta, and outside the Town Hall.

About 11 o'clock, when the crowd filled the square and choked the entrance to the hall, the hoarse bellow of the factory whistle suddenly sounded the alarm.

"He's coming," shouted the throng, and a rush was started for the Augusta road. Tearing along in the lead were a squad of State policemen on motorcycles, and closely trailing them were two automobiles with curtains drawn. In the first was Sheriff Cummings, with Kirby handcuffed to his left wrist, while the second was packed with armed deputies.

SEARCHED FOR WEAPONS.

Sweeping up to the town hall, the State policemen dismounted and cleared a lane to the door, up which the prisoner was rushed, and inside, where other guards were already on duty. Each person who then entered was searched for a weapon, and after the seats were taken, the doors were closed.

While this was going on, Mrs. Emma M. Towne, recovering at the local Community Hospital from the bullet wounds believed inflicted by Kirby, was told for the first time of the brutal death of her niece.

Still weak, the woman showed no emotion when her physician, Dr. Badger, imparted the sad news. Her only comment was:

"I wonder why he'd do such a thing if he did do it?"

Kirby may be revealed in a few hours as a modern Bluebeard by a grizzled captain of the New York police department after ending a hunt he has relentlessly followed for the past three years.

SKELETON FOUND.

Captain Grant Williams, now retired, but three years ago head of the Missing Persons Bureau of the New York police, is the officer who has searched for Kirby since the skeleton of the Williams girl was found in the hills near Nyack, N. Y. It is the veteran officer who will endeavor to fasten that crime on the man who already faces life imprisonment for the brutal slaying of the Winthrop girl and the shooting of her aunt.

Lillian White, an inmate of the Letchworth Village Home for the Feeble-Minded, disappeared from the institution in the Fall of 1921. Her skeleton was found the following April, and at the time the body was found James J. Crawford, an attendant and former inmate of the Letchworth institution, disappeared.

Captain Williams took up the search for Crawford. He traced Crawford to Maine, where the trail was lost, although he did locate the man's wife, who was known as Mrs. Ruby Crawford.

The police veteran is convinced that Crawford and Kirby, the man accused of the Winthrop murder, are the same person. He was ordered to Augusta, and he will question Kirby at length, after which he will carry his report to the authorities of New York, for what action they deem necessary.

Meanwhile, two sisters and a brother of the slain White girl have demanded the reopening of the investigation into their sister's death. Word reached here today that the family has retained a New York attorney, Julius H. Hofelder, who has addressed a letter to District Attorney Morton Lexow of Rockland county, New York, demanding that the case of the White girl and Crawford be reopened.

DEMANDS INQUIRY.

"On behalf of the relatives of Lillian White, who had been an inmate of Letchworth Home in Rockland county and who was found murdered in 1921, I ask you to bring to the attention of the grand jury all the facts concerning her death.

"This matter is called to my attention by the relatives because one Harry A. Kirby, who is also known as James Joseph Crawford, a former employe of the Letchworth Home, is now charged with the murder of a young woman at Winthrop, Me.

"You are aware that in 1922 the relatives urged that this James Crawford be indicted by the Rockland county grand jury. I am hopeful that in view of all the ear marks showing that he may have committed several murders, that you as an official of Rockland county will take notice and permit the relatives to bring their testimony, which indicates with strong probability that Crawford is guilty of the murder of Lillian White."

Winthrop officials have searched the Bearce camp, two cottages away from the Gray cottage in which Kirby concealed the body of the murdered girl. The Bearce place was rigidly examined, couches, chairs and bedding being given a specially thorough examination.

PHOTOGRAPHS TAKEN.

An official photographer accompanied the investigators and made "shots" within the house. When the authorities left they bore a mysterious bundle of clothing.

The search was conducted while curious sight-seers were kept a distance from the cottages by state police. A search of the lake shore was made. Kirby, the authorities say, told them he hurled a 32-calibre revolver into the lake.

Attorney-General Southard, in an official statement, revealed all of the admissions made by Kirby in his examination. The statement is a history of his life. Kirby admits:

His real name is LOUIS BLUNT. He doesn't know who his parents were.

After various larceny charges, which Kirby admits, he says he was graduated from a patient to an attendant at the Letchworth Village School for Feeble Minded.

Before that, he says, he practiced embalming in New York and attended the Renaud Training School. He returned to Letchworth and married his present wife.

ARMED GIRL AND KING OF LAKE RUM RING CAUGHT

Rochester, N. Y., May 27 (A.P.)—Lake Ontario's rum ring is believed to have been smashed by the capture today of Ben Kerr of Toronto, alleged king of the lake rum runners, as he was unloading a cargo of Canadian ale at Oklahoma on the lake shore near Sea Breeze.

Arrested with Kerr were four men and an armed girl, dressed in overalls. The seizure was made by Andrew J. Wiedenmann, collector of the port, customs inspectors and a Coast Guard cutter, after Kerr attempted to escape. Eight shots fired at the rum craft found their mark and brought the boat to a halt.

3 LEADERS IN SOFIA BOMBING ARE HANGED

Sofia, Bulgaria, May 27 (A.P.)—Three of the leaders in the recent bombing of the Sveti Kral Cathedral, in which 180 persons were killed, were hanged here today. The men executed were Peter Zadgorsky, custodian of the Cathedral, Marco Friedman and George Kosff.

Kosff mounted the scaffold first and a Gypsy executioner adjusted the noose around his neck. Zadgorsky came second, tottering up the steps with difficulty. Friedman approached the hangman with his head held proudly erect.

AMUNDSEN MAY BE GONE FOR MONTHS

Experts Believe He Is Busy Taking Surveys at Pole and Exploring New Territory

for an Arctic flight than next month," he said. "If the trip is ever to be undertaken June is the time to start.

"If the flight were made, and the Amundsen party were sighted, we could fly low and rescue them with rope ladders dropped from the control cab. We could at least give them sufficient rations and other necessaries to keep them alive until a favorable opportunity for rescue offered.

"If they were physically weak we could send men off the ship by rope ladders to help them up to the dirigible.

"We could do many things that an airplane rescue party could not do, because of the greater cruising radius and passenger-carrying capacity of the dirigible. An airplane rescue party would be practically of no use, so far as I can see."

If the party lands within twenty-five miles of the pole, a journey on foot would be preferable to a trip through the air, MacMillan added.

"If on this foot journey Amundsen encounters ice similar to that seen by us in 1914, he wouldn't be back for several days.

"If Amundsen's planes should be down in rough ice it would take several days to construct a 'run' for his planes. If he missed Spitzbergen on his return he is down, adrift, and out of gas, with the remote possibility of rescue.

"If he is down at the North Pole and cannot rise, which is very unlikely, I fear the worst in spite of his one month's provisions. To walk over the rough and snow-covered ice of the Polar sea, intersected with open and thin ice-covered leads, for 600 miles to Spitzbergen or 418 to Cape Columbia, at this time of the year is utterly impossible for the best fo men."

Believe Amundsen Will Be Gone Several Months

Oslo, Norway, May 27 (I.N.S.).—Clearing weather and bright skies in the polar region gave scientists and members of the Amundsen-Ellsworth party, who are still at Spitzbergen, renewed hope today that Amundsen and his five associates would soon return in safety from their North Pole flight.

A greater length of time must elapse, it was believed by government officials, before there is sufficient apprehension on the part of the Norwegian government or the United States or any other outside agency to send searchers after Amundsen. It will be several days more before the government will consider steps should be taken to determine what has happened to the Amundsen-Ellsworth flyers.

Prestrud, one of Amundsen's colleagues on the South Pole expedition, said he had not given up hope, and would not, even if several months passed without news. He recalled that three days were found necessary to fix the position of the South Pole. He believes, he said, it would take a similar length of time to fix the position of the North Pole, where conditions, he thinks, are more difficult.

Prestrud does not see why Amundsen should not overcome all difficulties, even if he has to march afoot, as did Nansen.

Amundsen May Be Busy Even Now, Says MacMillan

Washington, May 27 (A.P.)—Hope for the safe return of the Amundsen polar expedition was held out today by Donald B. MacMillan, arctic explorer.

The mere problem of locating the pole itself by a stronomical observation, MacMillan said, might in itself have required several days to accomplish.

"It is inconceivable," he asserted, "that any man, howsver good a pilot, can fly from the north end of Spitzbergen for a distance of 600 miles in a straight line and drop down upon the North Pole, or even within 50 miles of it."

him, all of which failed to take effect.

Inspectors Rollins, Donovan, Alexander, Burke and Boucher went to Woburn early today and with Chief Macauley routed the clerk of the local court out of bed, and had him sign a search warrant.

They then proceeded to the old farmhouse, which has been unoccupied for several years. Concealing themselves they waited, and in a short time an automobile containing tow men drove up to the door. As the occupants started to get out the officers seized them, and despite their struggles placed them under arrest.

Leaving them handcuffed in the machine under guard, the officers broke open the door and found Corcoran in bed. He, too, started to give battle, but was disarmed. In closets in the house the bolts of cloth were found.

Back in Prison, Why?---By Donald Lowrie

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

A HOME PAPER FOR THE PEOPLE WHO THINK

BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, MAY 27, 1925

A paper that goes into the home. Dependable, fearless, entertaining and educational.

SPIED UPON BY FRIEND, LOWRIE 'SLIPS'

Resents 'Shadow' Put on Trail to Halt Drinking and Gets Drunk

Back in a felon's cell, after nearly fourteen years of freedom, a victim of his own weakness, and slowly dying of tuberculosis, Donald Lowrie describes the path of sin and shame he trod. Paroled to finish his great book, "My Life in Prison," he gained the confidence of governors and many high in civic and industrial life. But within a short time he was secretly drinking heavily and indulging in numerous intrigues with women.

CHAPTER XXXII.

MY clothes were brought to me within a few minutes after Older left, and after I had hastily put them on and nobody appeared to unlock me I sat on the cell cot, elbows on knees and my head in my hands, thinking.

I could not understand how Older could have done such a thing to me. It was absolutely contrary to his nature and theories. Time and time again I had heard him say he did not believe jail ever did anyone any good. He must have become convinced that my case was pretty desperate. Either that or he was at last out of patience with me.

I couldn't fathom it. The more I thought about it the angrier I got, especially when I recalled how I had been placed under espionage and humiliatingly harassed, presumably by Older's orders, some months before.

I had been asked to speak before a club in Pasadena and on the afternoon of the day preceding my engagement stepped into Older's office to tell him I would be leaving for Los Angeles on the "Lark" that night and was scheduled to speak in Pasadena the next night. I had taken three or four drinks that day, but had no idea that liquor showed on me. My friend, John D. Barry, was with Older, and after a short conversation I withdrew, both of them wishing me luck as I passed out of the room.

A Highball and A Soft Drink

That night while I was sitting in the club car on the "Lark," comfortably imbibing a Scotch highball in walked Barry.

I was much surprised to see him. He nodded pleasantly, sat down at my table and ordered a soft drink—I've forgotten just what. I saw him eyeing my tall glass speculatively.

His presence annoyed me. I knew intuitively that he was on that train for no other purpose than to watch me, to see I did not get to drinking. If such were not the case, why had he not told me he would be traveling south with me when I had seen him.

AMERICAN POLICY IS TAKEN BY FULLER

TEACHER VERSUS PUPIL IN FISTIC BOUT

Boston Strike Pickets Out, Painters Go to Work

Alvan T. Fuller's name is signed on the dotted line of the greatest insurance policy ever issued—the $7,500 risk given to readers of the Boston Evening American for just One Dollar. "It's the only thing for the prudent man who would protect those near and dear to him," says Mr. Fuller. He is seen passing the signed policy to Andrew J. Shannon, special agent for this particular form of insurance.

STRIKERS IN NEW MOVE

While agents of the 5,000 striking laborers of the Boston building trades were going about the city today, calling workers from jobs operated by independent contractors, the 2,000 union painters who have been on strike for the past eight weeks were returning to their work.

With the five locals of the laborers' union planning an aggressive war in their strike for higher wages, the employers launched a counter-offensive by opening an employment office at No. 51 Court street, where all men seeking jobs as skilled or unskilled laborers were promptly employed.

While there has been no disorder of any kind in connection with the strike of the laborers, the police have placed officers about most of the big building jobs.

Strikers are engaged in peacefully picketing a number of the important jobs and these men have been cautioned by their leaders to avoid trouble of any kind.

Gen. Miles Wills Estate to Son and Daughter

Washington, May 27 (A.P.).—The will of Lieutenant General Nelson A. Miles, who died here two weeks ago, names his son, Major Sherman Miles, and his daughter, Mrs. Cecelia Miles Reber, as beneficiaries of an estate valued at "more than $50,000." Probating of the will showed that General Miles owned 400 acres of land in the Imperial Valley of California, the value of which was not stated, and personal property in this city valued at $50,000.

PRINCIPAL WHIPS BOY THEN QUITS JOB

Charlemont, May 27.—The Marquis of Queensbury has supplanted Cicero and Virgil in the Charlemont High School curriculum.

The ancient ring has become of more interest in the school than any theorem in the geometry text books, while left hooks, right jabs and rabbit punches are more talked of than diphthongs and class honors.

All of which has set the towns of Charlemont, Heath and Rowe on edge.

The fight, which has been waging in the schools for weeks over the question of administering punishment to the students, has split the community into two hostile camps.

The climax came when Acting Principal Donald McBride of the high school invited Gordon Cook, a student, into the basement of the school to fight it out. Cook accepted the invitation.

In the gloomy, dusty basement principal and student shed the vestiges of the school room.

With bare knuckles they attacked one another. From all reports of Principal Whitney, Teacher McBride was a slashing, dashing, knock-em-down and drag-em-out fighter.

The husky student is handy with his fists. The assistant principal, while no Jack Dempsey, packs a wicked left, it is said. At any rate teacher and scholar punched and hammered one another until they were tired.

The principal won the decision, then resigned his job.

The high school was closed today and the three towns are talking of little else.

The fist fight was the aftermath of trouble which started several weeks ago. Young Cook at that time was the cause of the trouble.

At a school committee meeting last night Fred L. Tyler was elected chairman to succeed George H. Frary, who resigned in a row with principal Whitney. Their dispute was a slashing, dashing, knock-em-now is in the courts.

Fuller Invests Dollar, Gets $7,500 Policy

Six persons were seriously injured in Greater Boston today.

One man's legs were badly crushed that one of them may have to be amputated. Four other persons were injured in a street car accident and another man was badly burned while trying to extinguish a fire.

To the deluge of Boston Evening American readers' applications for one of the Evening American's extraordinary accident insurance policies, Governor Alvan T. Fuller has added his.

As befits the Governor of the Commonwealth, his policy was issued to him almost immediately today at the State House and he signed the contract in his office. And the Governor already is heavily insured in addition.

When he had replaced his fountain pen, the Governor said with reference to the Boston Evening American's remarkable offer of a $7,500 travel accident policy:

"Insurance is not only a business. It is an institution. It protects the home and family. All prudent men who wish to safeguard those who are dear to them, should not procrastinate with this essential obligation."

The Boston Evening American has arranged with the North American Accident Insurance Company of Chicago, one of the oldest and most reliable insurance companies in the country, to issue 500,000 policies for the readers of this paper and the members of their families.

ENROLLMENT FEE OF $1.

These policies are in the sum of $7,500 each, and the holder of one of the policies is protected from all forms of travel accidents. Any person between the ages of sixteen and seventy may obtain one of the policies, without examination or without red tape of any kind.

No medical examination is required. All fuss, bother, detail and preliminaries have been attended to when you fill out the Application Coupon and send it to this office with One Dollar in check, or Postal Money Order. THERE WILL BE NO ADDITIONAL CHARGE OF ANY SORT WHATEVER.

It is almost unbelievable that one can buy so much protection for such a small amount. Among the provisions of the policy are:

A payment of $7,500 if the insured meets accidental death while riding on railroad train or street car.

$1,000 if the insured is killed in a privately owned automobile or horse-drawn vehicle, taxicab or omnibus.

$1,000 if killed by tornado, cyclone, flood, falling wall or in any accident occurring in a public building or theatre.

$1,000 if killed as a pedestrian by any moving vehicle.

$10 every week, for a period of disablement not exceeding 15 weeks, if injured in any of the above named accidents.

The policy will be issued within a few days after your application is received. Bear in mind that this service is open to only those who are Home Delivery subscribers to The Boston Evening American, or (see Application Form) THOSE WHO ASK TO BE REGISTERED AS SUCH HOME DELIVERY SUBSCRIBERS.

Claims will be adjusted and paid through the Boston Evening American's service department, No. 8 Winthrop square, Boston.

BOY'S FATE IN DEATH CASE WITH JURY

The case of Hallie Mowbray, 18-year-old New Brunswick youth, accused of murder and of being an accessory after the murder of Frederick Clemts, Burlington garage man, went to the jury in the Middlesex County Superior Court today after Mowbray told Judge Brown and a jury how he had been threatened with death if he didn't obey the commands of Clement's slayers and help them dispose of the body.

Clements was killed by a man named Frank Morse and another, known only as "Bill," after he had gone upstairs over the garage to bed on the night of September 27, 1924, Mowbray testified.

Morse gave him $5 of the $73 which he took from Clement's pockets, and threatened him by saying, "Don't you dare to say anything about this. If I thought you would 'fess roll you up with him." Mowbray said they forced him to help weight the body and throw it into the Shawsheen River.

FRANCE SENDS GIFT TO WELLESLEY COLLEGE

Vases valued at more than $750 together with busts of Washington and Franklin, were included in a fiftieth birthday gift from the Republic of France, received at Wellesley College today. The gift included four pieces of Sevres ware and two beautiful vases from the collection of the Musee de la Manufacture Nationale de Sevres. The gifts were presented to Wellesley in Paris by President Doumergue, and accepted for the college by Edwin Farnham Green of Boston, president of the board of trustees. The gift is an acknowledgement by France of the help rendered by Wellesley during the war.

STUDENT DROPS DEAD ON VERGE OF DISCOVERY

Yale Chemical Research Man Falls Victim to Cyanide

New Haven, May 27.—A year ago a quiet, unassuming young man came to Yale University to take up special chemical research work.

He quickly won the interest of the professors. The chemical problem which he expounded to them proved of such vast importance, it is said, that they assigned to him a private room in the Sterling Chemical Building, on Prospect Hill.

To his fellow students he was something of an enigma. He was looked upon as a learned recluse. Morning, noon and night found him in the little laboratory, amid his alembics and chemicals, bent over his work, hardly heeding the normal periods for eating and rest.

STUDENTS DISCUSS EVENT.

Therefore, little was known of him. He was Eustace Guy, twenty-seven, of Pittsburgh. "That quiet fellow," nothing more.

It was whispered about that the problem on which he was working so assiduously would astound the world when solved.

On the campus today little knots of students gathered. They discussed with solemn interest the startling event. Guy at last had solved his problem.

Some of them had been eye-witnesses to his last entrance into his laboratory. He had not even nodded. Something had happened, they thought.

DROPS DEAD ON FLOOR.

He remained in the room a little while. Students heard sounds that led them to believe Guy was "making some chemical experiment."

Suddenly he walked from the room, confronted the group outside, raised his hand for silence, and said: "I have solved the problem—"

His cyanide of potassium acts swiftly. He fell to the floor dead.

Chestnut Hill Horse Show to Be Largest in 22 Years

Entries Have Piled Up Until There Are Nearly 400 for Saturday's Event at Longwood Grounds

Betty Alden

NEXT SATURDAY'S CHESTNUT HILL Horse Show at the Longwood Cricket Club grounds is to be by far the largest the club has staged in all its twenty-two years. Entries have piled up until there are nearly four hundred, offering a variety of spirited ring pictures for lovers of fine horseflesh.

EVERY RIDER is an amateur, from the tiny tots whose ponies figure as entrants up to the seniors of the Saltonstall, Bigelow, Bird, Tuckerman and other horsey families whose blue-ribboners appear in practically every show up and down the Coast.

YOUTHFUL RIDERS in the George S. West family, little Dorothy West and her brother, George, Junior, Mary James Bigelow, small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Prescott Bigelow, and Elizabeth Hovey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chandler Hovey, have their horses entered.

ALSO ANNE STEVENS, Marian Reggio, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. A. William Reggio; Virginia McNeil, the Harold McNeils' daughter; Jane Wheeler of the J. William Wheeler family; Esther Bemis, Barbara Frost and Frances Gardiner.

THESE YOUTHFUL aspirants for ring honors are all children in Chestnut Hill families, for such are the conditions under which the Saltonstall cup was put up, some few years ago, by the family of the late Richard Middlecott Saltonstall.

CHILDREN FROM Chestnut Hill and elsewhere are entered in the horsemanship class. They, too, are of the juvenile ones whose heads not more than fifteen Summers have passed. Nancy Ayer and Rebecca Hallowell, Barbara Frost (daughter of the George S. Frosts) and Evelyn Hollingsworth have entries.

THE BOWDITCH children, John B. and Florence H., and those two extremely clever horsewomen in the Reginald W. Bird household, Patricia and Betty, will dash about the tanbark in the horsemanship class, their mounts either horses or ponies.

ANOTHER CHILDREN'S event sure to attract no end of interested spectators, particularly doting parents of the contenders, is the pony class for the Francis W. Lee memorial cup. Sixteen years is the age limit.

JOHN B. BOWDITCH and Robert Bennet Forbes, the latter a son in the Allan Forbes family; Frances Gardiner, Lucy W. Hill, George S. West, Jr., John and Florence Bowditch, Virginia and Jack Lewis, all have their ponies entered.

FOR THE Nora Saltonstall memorial cup for qualified hunters, one of the late afternoon events, there is a brilliant field. The Richard Saltonstall horses, "Sarah B." and "Moonlighter;" Miss Ruth Neyhart's "Black Thorn" and Dr. Freeman Allen's "Talk of the Town" will prance about the ring and over the hurdles.

A PARTICULARLY large field for the hunters class, twenty-seven in all, is entered, and besides those just mentioned Mrs. L. Tucker Burr, Jr., is entering her horse "Chance," John P. Bowditch is putting his hopes on "Go On", and Miss Alice Stuart has her blue ribboner, "Blue Fern," in the lists.

TOWER HILL FARM mounts, wearing the Clarke Baldwin-Louis Liggett colors, will be contestants. Miss Muriel Bliss enters her "Sunlight," and those indefatigable followers of various sports, the Bayard Tuckermans, Jr., show a trio of horses.

"DESERT QUEEN" pronounced by the Prince of Wales "one of the best horses he had ever ridden," and "Pink Coat" carry the Tuckerman colors, and "Irish" completes the trio. The bugle sounds for the Hunters class just before noon.

BRILLIANT HORSEMANSHIP will set the galleries a-thrill in two classes particularly, those for hunt teams of three horses each and pair hunters. Also the Montgomery-Rollins cup for saddle horse entries.

EIGHT TEAMS OF three horses each have been entered, representing the Millwood Hunt Club, Tower Hill Farm, the Norfolk Hunt Club, Waveney Farm and the stables of Richard Saltonstall, Leverett Saltonstall, Mr. and Mrs. Bayard Tuckerman and Elmer Jared Bliss.

IN THE SADLE class Miss Betty Bird's "Chocolate Soldier," a consistent winner whenever entered; George S. West's "Pepper Pot," Mr. and Mrs. Homer Loring and Miss Elizabeth Loring's "Volcano" and "Valhalla" will furnish some of the sport for onlookers.

THOSE FAMILIAR figures in Chestnut Hill sport affairs, Miss Andrea Adie and Mrs. Robert Brayton Almy (Rosamond Adie), will be absent this season from the show ring out at the Cricket Club.

MR. AND MRS. ALMY sailed abroad on their honeymoon journey a month or so ago, and, in all probability, are today in the throngs at Epsom Downs, England, to see the world-famous Derby run off. Such was their avowed intention when they left these shores.

GOLF IS holding Miss Andrea Adie in thrall just now, and she and other lights of the Smart Set are garnering all sorts of honors over the Country Club links. The golf matches will probably continue through Saturday. So the galleries are due to miss both young women this year.

Miss Margery Richardson, attractive daughter of the Frederic L. W. Richardsons of "Laneside" in Charles River Village, will be a bridesmaid for the marriage of Miss Alice Herrick and George Saltonstall Mumford, Jr., on June 23.

BOILER EXPLODES ON CRUISER; NO ONE HURT

JAIL WITNESS IN SHEPHERD TRIAL

Comb New York for Man Who Said Germs Were Bought to Kill McClintock

Chicago, May 27 (A.P.)—While Robert White, fugitive witness upon whose testimony the State largely rests its hope of convicting William D. Shepherd for the murder of William McClintock, was being sought in New York today, the State's attorney's office proceeded with its inquiry into alleged jury fixing attempts.

State's Attorney Crowe traced White to New York and expects his arrest today. Meanwhile the formal arrest of James J. Kelly turned the prosecutor's office into a buzzing hive of activity around which Crowe threw a blanket of secrecy.

Kelly was named in a letter purported to have been written by White in Philadelphia, which charged he had been forced to flee. Kelly admitted having been with White and Arthur E. Byrne, investigator for Shepherd, the night before White left.

Crowe said Kelly had "implicated White."

White, in obtaining from the American Express Company trunks he had shipped from Chicago, gave a fictitious address in New York City, detectives said. Detectives have found no trace of him other than the express company's records.

White's testimony to the Grand Jury was in support of C. C. Fatman's assertions that he had sold five typhoid germs to Shepherd with the knowledge they were to be used in killing McClintock.

Only three jurors and one venireman have been tentatively passed by both sides.

PHILIPPINE POLICE CRUSH STRONGHOLD OF MOROS

Manila, May 27.—Governor-General Leonard Wood today received a dispatch from Major Johnson, Governor of Lanao province, announcing the successful assault of the fortress from which Sultan Raya and other Moros have been defying the authorities for some months.

After a preliminary shelling with field guns and mortars the fortress was stormed by the constabulary. Seven Moros are known to have been killed. Some escaped. The constabulary suffered no casualties.

SHUBERTS GAIN CONTROL OF 3 LONDON THEATRES

London, May 27 (A.P.)—According to the newspapers today, the American theatrical firm of Lee and J. J. Shubert, Inc., has acquired a half share in a company owning three big London theatres. It is stated that the deal involved about £160,000, or roughly $727,800.

Shubert offices in New York would neither affirm nor deny the story. Lee Shubert is in London.

KLANSMEN ARE STONED IN WILD AUTO CHASE

Autos Pursued From Clinton All the Way to Leominster

Clinton, May 27.—Aroused from their beds by the sounding of ten false fire alarms rung in rapid successions, anti-Ku Klux Klan forces rushed to High street early today and attacked a column of Ku Klux Klansmen, who were returning on foot and in automobiles from a gathering held in Brewers Field at Berlin.

The rioting which resulted when the Klan and anti-Klan forces clashed was the worst in the history of this section of the State.

Stones and brickbats were showered on the Klansmen and despite the efforts of the entire Clinton police force, the rioting continued until the Klansmen were driven from Clinton.

Some of the machines bearing the Klansmen were pursued as far as Leominster, ten miles distant, the shower of missiles continuing throughout the long chase.

Scores of persons were injured by the flying stones, but a police check-up failed to reveal any fatalities and no arrests were made.

The police searched dozens of the rioters for weapons, but not a single revolver or gun was brought in.

The property loss will mount into large figures. Automobile windshields and enclosing glasses were broken. The bodies of a number of machines were badly damaged, while one of the alleged Klansmen, J. W. Parker, was rescued from the hands of the mob by the police and was escorted under police protection to his home on High street.

The meeting of the Klan at Berlin was secretly planned, and hundreds of members of the order, many of them hooded, gathered at the field and listened to addresses. The ceremonies were concluded shortly before midnight by the burning of a huge cross.

PLEASANT WEATHER DUE FOR NEXT FEW DAYS

The sort of weather Boston is having today will continue for the next few days, according to Weather Bureau experts. Virtually no rain or hot weather are in sight. Forecaster Loveland reported today. He predicts continued fair weather, with only moderate rises in temperature for today and tomorrow, and sees no reason why the same conditions should not prevail until it is time for the usual week-end rains.

A light frost, the tenth of the present month, was reported in Lexington and Concord today with a minimum reading of thirty-four.

NEW STAR IS FOUND, HARVARD HEARS

Discovered at Cape of Good Hope; Is Visible to the Naked Eye

The new stars visible to the naked eye, discovered since 1848, which number only twelve, were added to by the discovery at the Cape of Good Hope on Monday, by Professor Watson of a new or temporary star of the first magnitude in the constellation Pictor, in the Southern Hemisphere. Announcement of the discovery was made at Harvard today.

The new star, according to word received at the Harvard College Observatory from the Central Bureau of Astronomical Telegrams at Copenhagen, is too far south to be seen in the United States unless it may be visible in the extreme southern parts of Florida and Texas. It is called Nova Pictoris.

Harvard authorities say the discovery of a new star, especially one visible to the naked eye, is one of the most interesting and important phenomena known to astronomers.

POLICE SEEKING THREE IN FAKE GOLD SALE

Boston police are searching for three swindlers who sold William Wiebie of No. 1488 Columbia road, South Boston, a box of brass slugs for $2,400.

A Lowell man and a friend called on Wiebie in connection with a business deal. They mentioned a sailor they knew who had a box of gold he was anxious to sell.

The sailor and his box of "gold" appeared. The two visitors handed over their $1,800 and then Wiebie turned over his $2,400.

MALCOLM TELLS OF NAGGING BY HIS WIFE

Says She Called Him a Mean Sneak as They Held Hands

While he was holding hands with her, she called him down, and said he was a mean sneak.

When he was trying to be sociable and domestic, she threw an apple at him.

Adding insult to injury, she called him a "long-legged Scotchman" has assaulted her; stopped her credit, once and, at another time, a mean thing.

Such was the substance of the testimony given in Middlesex Probate Court today by George Frederick Malcolm, Boston business man, who is suing his wife for divorce. He alleges cruelty and cites the above as samples of her treatment of him.

Testifying yesterday, Mr. Malcolm said she had hit him on the knee.

Mr. Malcolm today described an auto ride with his wife. She began, he said, by "bawling" him out because his daughter by a previous marriage had sent her letters to his office instead of to his home. He was holding hands with her at the time and she pulled her hands away, he said.

After she had called him a sneak, a long-legged Scotchman and a few other things, he said, he pulled her out of his limousine and sent her home in a taxicab.

Mrs. Malcolm is suing for separate support. She alleges her husband and tried to induce her servants to quit.

WANT FORD TO OPERATE AND NOT JUNK IDLE SHIPS

Washington, May 27 (A.P.).—Chairman O'Connor of the Shipping Board is hopeful that Henry Ford will submit offers for the purchase of twenty or thirty ships, at least, for operation, in addition to entering the field for purchase of a considerable number for scrapping.

Specifications of idle refrigerating ships have been sent to the Detroit manufacturer with the expectation that they may be used by Mr. Ford in carrying automobile parts to South American ports and on the return bringing fruits.

The board today considered further a policy of scrapping, with indications that it would approve selling 260 idle ships for junking, but might decide to dispose of them in small lots, so as not to disturb the market.

M. C. O. F. MEMBERS SEEING BOSTON'S SIGHTS

CURLEY LAUDS M. C. O. F., RAPS KU KLUX KLAN

For its charity and its elevation of womanhood to a high place in the organization, the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters was warmly lauded today by Mayor Curley at the opening session of its 46th annual convention.

More than 1,100 delegates massed in the meeting room at the Copley Plaza Hotel cheered he Mayor as he referred briefly but bitterly to the Ku Klux Klan and told the Foresters their organization is a powerful antidote against religious and racial prejudice.

During his address, the Mayor promised tomorrow . . give the delegates a luncheon and to provide city boats on which hey might tour the harbor.

GIVEN HISTORIC GAVEL.

Although a ball was given at the Copley Plaza last night, he real convention was opened tday with a solemh high mass attended by all the delegates at St. Cecelia's Church in the Back Bay. The Rev. James H. O'Neil, LL.D., pastor of the Sacred Heart Church, East Boston, High Court Chaplain of the Order, was the celebrant, and priests attached to St. Cecelia's assisted.

Following mass Mayor Curley, a member of the order, welcomed the delegates to Boston and presenteh to Dr. Mary I. Deberis-McGilicuddy, high chief ranger and the first woman o hold that post, a gavel made from an old newel post of Faneuil Hall.

Chaplain O'Neil then offered prayer and nominations were called for to fill offices for the ensuing year. The following were nominated: John H. O'Hara of Salem, for high chief ranger; Peter J. McArdle of Charlestown, for vice high chief ranger; Mrs. Mary A. Costello of Bowen for high senior conductor; Peter A. Welsh, Boston, high junior conductor; James Donovan, Springfield, high inside sentinel; Miss Mary McGovern of Boston and Joseph McCabe, Quincy, high outside sentinel; John J. Collins, Springfield, trutsee for three years, and Thomas Kelly of Boston for member of the finance committee.

The delegates voted to reduce the minimum age requirement for entrance into the order from eighteen to sixteen years old. It was announced that the membership now stood at 60,000, an increase of 4,000 over last year.

URGES HEALTH DRIVE.

High Chief Ranger Dr. McGilicuddy, who is the first woman to hold the highest office in the Foresters organization, although it has been in existence for forty-six years, is a former Spanish War nurse and apart from the Foresters is one of the best known women in Massachusetts. In her address she advocated a series of public health lectures on preventive medicine to be given throughout the year in all courts of the order. Such a series she asserted, would prolong the lives of members.

Embodied in her list of recommendations as retiring presiding officer were:

1—That the high standing committee, with the assistance of the finance committee, study and develop a budget system for expenditures.

2—That a committee be appointed by the high standing committee to study ways and means by which organization and growth may be developed.

3—That a committee be appointed by the high standing committee to devis ways and means by which suspensions may be reduced.

4—That a scholarship in memory of past high chief rangers be found ed in the future.

5—That a per capita tax of 10 cents be levied on all members for the purpose of raising sufficient funds for the O'Sullivan Lawlor fund.

NOTES OF THE FORESTERS' CONVENTION

One of the most interesting features of the morning session of the Foresters' convention was the presentation to Dr. Helen I. D. MacGilicuddy, retiring high chief ranger, of a gavel made of the wood of one of the original posts of Faneuil Hall. Mayor Curley made the presentation.

Dr. MacGillicuddy is considered one of the most popular and competent executives who ever has held the position of high chief ranger and with her husband, who also is a physician, has been an ardent worker for the order for years.

Another accomplished executive is Mrs. Helen Galvin, president of the Past Chief Rangers. She is chairman of the committee which added 4,000 new members to the order in five weeks. In addition to her work as an official of the order this talented Boston woman is well known as a singer.

For the firs ttime in the history of Forestry a woman seems likely to be appointed to a position usually considered the prerogative of the men of the organization that of outside sentinel. Miss Mary McGovern of St. Claire Court, past chief ranger, and formerly consul of the Knights of St. Rose, is the nominee.

William Hayes, former mayor of Springfield, is one of the welcoming visitors to the meetings.

Mrs. Mary Costello who will become high senior conductor, is one of the many professional women of Boston. She is a practicing lawyer.

Virtually all the delegates have arrived and the ballroom at the Copley Plaza was filled to overflowing with enthusiastic Foresters, both men and women. Women form about 50 per cent of the membership of 58,000 and have ably filled the highest executive positions in the order.

LOWRIE TELLS WHY HE IS IN PRISON

FRIEND FAILS TO SAVE HIM FROM LIQUOR HABIT

with Older late that afternoon and disclosed my program?

My conviction was strengthened when he failed to offer any explanation for his presence, although I threw out several hints. I knew that Barry meant nothing unfriendly, but I was nevertheless incensed.

When the train arrived at Los Angeles next morning Barry suggested that "we" go to the Alexandria Hotel, and I offered no objection. We engaged connecting rooms and after we had sprucued up a bit I announced that I was going downstairs. To my annoyance Barry promptly got his hat and accompanied me. In the lobby we stood aimlessly for a few minutes and then I told him I was going in to the bar for a drink and would be back in a minute.

"Oh, don't! Please don't!" Barry objected. "I may as well tell you first as last that I came along on this trip to keep you from drinking."

Mr. Older was afraid you might go to excess and——"

"Well, I'm going to drink a glass of wine only," I interrupted. "There was no need of your coming. I never drink much before a lecture."

'One Drink Always Leads to More'

I started for the barroom entrance and Barry laid his hand on my arm.

"I wish you wouldn't Lowrie," he pleaded. "You don't need it and one drink always leads to more."

I stood seething with mixed emotions, struggling hard not to say what was uppermost in my mind. I wanted to tell Barry to mind his own business. Instead I said: "Very well—have your way, but it won't make me very fit to talk tonight. I'm nervous and I need a drink."

We went back upstairs where he tried to talk and be pleasant. I sulked. At lunch time I declined to go down with him to the dining room. About 4 o'clock I declared that I couldn't stand the noise from the street any longer and that I was going to Pasadena and get located in one of the quiet hotels there. There were no saloons in Pasadena, the saloons were dry through local option, but Barry evidently didn't know that.

He tried to argue me out of my resolve, but I remained obdurate. Finally he said he knew the very place for "us" to go and before I realized what he was doing he had called up the hotel office and ordered a taxi.

Downstairs a few minutes later I let him attend to the checking out and the payment of the bill. If he wanted to be my jailer the expense was no concern of mine.

We were driven out a winding road to a hotel on the top of Mt. Washington, where we engaged two rooms. When dinner time came I was mad as a hornet and declined to enter the dining room. Barry finally went in alone, leaving me to continue my pacing back and forth on the verandah.

It was an excellent opportunity for me to "escape," but the lecture hour was close. I knew Barry could easily pick me up at the hall, even though I might evade him for the time being. I also reasoned that after the lecture had been delivered I would be left free to go where I willed.

I spoke that night on sheer nervous force. I had eaten nothing since morning and I was angry clear through. At the conclusion of my talk I felt weak physically. I was told afterwards that the lecture was very intense and one of the most convincing I had ever delivered.

Invitation to Go After 'Refreshments'

While talking I was surprised to see George in the audience at the back part of the room. When I finished he was one of the first to come up to the rostrum to greet me.

"Come on back to Los Angeles with me," he invited. "I'm stopping at the Lankershim. You look tired and worn out. We'll hurry back and get some refreshments."

Barry had joined us while George was speaking and before I could accept the invitation he made some remark to the effect that he had first claim on me. George regarded me keenly, evidently sensing that there was something wrong.

"Sorry, Mr. Barry," I laughed, "but I haven't seen George for some time. I'm going over to Los Angeles with him. See you tomorrow."

Barry said nothing, but when George and I left the hall he came along with us. The lady under whose auspices the lecture had been arranged was also with us and voiced her disappointment again that I was unable to accept her invitation to remain over night at her residence. She had extended the invitation to me when she handed me a check before the lecture, but I had politely declined. I knew that before the lecture was concluded I would want a drink badly and I confidently expected that Barry would drop me and let me go my way.

'We'll Meet Again In San Francisco'

This lady held us in conversation on the sidewalk for several minutes before entering her car and driving off. Then I turned to Barry, extended my hand and said: "Well, good night, Mr. Barry. Cancel my room at the Mt. Washington. If I don't see you sooner, we'll meet again in San Francisco."

"No, Lowrie, I'm going to remain with you," he announced. "I promised——"

"You're going to do nothing of the sort!" I interrupted angrily. "I've put up with enough from you already. Good night!"

Barry ignored my proffered hand. I turned and walked off, George accompanying me and calling, "Good night, John."

Barry followed, expostulating.

We stood still again and it developed into an argument.

What followed is hard to describe. Several times I was on the verge of striking Barry. How I refrained from doing so I don't know. We strode up and down the main street of Pasadena talking loudly and gesticulating. It was close to midnight. Barry cajoled, begged, argued, used all the eloquence at his command, trying to persuade me to return to the Mt. Washington with him.

Finally I stopped short and confronted him with clenched fists.

"You're going to stand right here while I walk away from you!" I declared. "If you follow, we fight, and we fight till the police come. Take your choice—a quiet separation or a street brawl with arrests. I mean what I say. Stay right where you are—or fight!"

And I walked rapidly away from him. My words and anger must have convinced Barry. I looked back as I turned the corner half a block away.

He was where I had left him, looking after me. Soon as I turned that corner I ran. I feared that he might change his mind and follow me anyway and that would have compelled me to strike him.

An hour later I was at the Lankershim. I retired, drunk, along toward daybreak.

Since I do not intend to say any more about him in my story I might as well add a paragraph here about George. Although something in his temperament was dangerous to me, I must admit in justice to him that he has "made good" since leaving prison. Apparently he has helped others as profoundly as he has me through my own weaknesses. He left prison before I did, and has not only stayed out of prison—as I have not been able—but has done good work for prison reform organization and has recently written a very instructive book, "The Twenty-fifth Man," about prison conditions.

All this and the many other efforts on the part of my friends to control me passed through my mind as I sat there on the cot in that cell at the emergency hospital, waiting for someone to come and let me out.

The recollections, instead of making me grateful, made me resentful and savage. I felt that it had all been an unwarranted interference with my personal liberty and that it was time for me to make a final declaration of independence.

Barry's continued efforts to "bring back" Lowrie excites the drink-crazed man to make several attempts to strike his friend.

PET DOG HOLDS REVERE POLICE AT BAY

Keeps Officers From Master Lying Intoxicated in Revere Station

Scofflaws who indulge in Revere moonshine should take a leaf from the experiences of George Gallagher when they go on a drinking expedition.

Take your dog with you, everywhere you go, is Gallagher's formula. It worked so well that while Gallagher reclined dead to the world in the Revere street station of the Narrow Gauge Railroad, his faithful Boston terrier defied the entire Revere police department.

A small boy with a lasso, which he shaped from a piece of clothesline, was all that enabled the police to get Gallagher in their possession.

When Gallagher assumed a position of repose on the floor of the station, the dog took up his vigil by his master's side.

Patrolman Foley of the Revere force happened along. He reached for the collar of the sleeping man, but quickly changed his mind when twenty-five pounds of angry dog, snarling and snapping, leaped at him.

Patrolman Sweeney came up in the nature of reinforcements. He also reached for the slumberer. This time the dog was not content with driving the policeman away from his master—he chased the policeman to the top of a nearby coal bin, where the officer stayed.

The dog resumed his vigil, while the discouraged policemen vainly endeavored to contrive some scheme of placating the faithful guardian.

$40,000 IN RUM SEIZED BY U. S. VANISHES

Providence, R. I., May 27 (A.P.)—About $40,000 worth of whisky, part of the large supply which the government took from Antonio Gasbarro, former liquor merchant in 1920, has been lost or stolen while in government custody in this city, according to charges made by Gasbarro. He claims to have discovered his loss when the prohibition authorities returned the confiscated goods to him on Monday, as ordered by Federal court more than a year ago.

Gasbarro says 2,850 gallons were taken and only 250 returned. Federal agents superintending the transfer admitted there was a shortage, but would divulge no amount. They claim it smaller than Gasbarro's estimate. Gasbarro has turned the matter over to attorneys.

Although the supply, along with 130 barrels of wine, was seized in 1920, it was two years later that Gasbarro was indicted. The prosecution admitted its case against him so weak that he was never brought to trial. The outcome was the order for the return of the liquor, which was signed in April, 1924.

GENERAL FOLEY URGES ALL TO READ BULLARD

YD Officer Says Articles Aid Appreciation of Doughboy's Work

Endorsements of the memoirs of General R. L. Bullard, now appearing in serial form in the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser, continue to come in.

The consensus of opinion of officers of the World War is that the story dealing frankly as it does with an interesting subject involving the entire world, should be of equal interest to civilians as well as veterans.

Among the letters received are the following:

F. FOLEY, commander of the 52nd Infantry Brigade, 26th Division, Mass. N. G.—I consider few men in better position than General R. L. Bullard for authorship of a story dealing with authentic facts concerning the World War and I am reading it intently.

"With Bullard in the World War" is written in a fine, interesting style and is dealing with an interesting subject. It would certainly lead to a greater appreciation of the boys who went over. If every American would read it. It would also give us greater pride in our own country. In knowing that it is populated with boys and men who are willing to go through great hardships and suffering to attain a given objective.

General Bullard's memoirs ought to be read by every one and the American is to be commended for printing them.

ATTORNEY JOHN H. O'BRIEN, former Judge Advocate, Massachusetts Department, American Legion:—

I consider "With Bullard in the World War" one of the finest stories I have ever read. It should be of extreme interest, not only to the ex-service men who were in the A. E. F. and in the training camps in the United States, but to every citizen of this country whether in or out of the armed forces at any or all time.

The writer knows what he is writing about and I would recommend it to every man, woman and child of the nation for it provides its readers with an intimate insight into what our boys and our nation were up against in the greatest armed struggle of all time.

Major Walter M. Pratt: From the standpoint of a man who spent his entire time in service at the Port of Embarkation, Hoboken, and would have given all he had to have gone across himself, I find General Bullard's articles a revelation and intensely interesting. If they mean that to me, their interest to men who have seen the actual events about which he writes, must be very much greater.

MODERNISTS SEE BREAK AMONG PRESBYTERIANS

Columbus, O., May 27 (A.P.)—A definite break in the Presbyterian Church in the United States is imminent, Modernists in the denomination's general assembly in session here declared today.

The split will come, Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin, New York, representing the liberal Presbytery there, said, if the various Presbyteries uphold action of the assembly yesterday in voting that a literal acceptance of the Virgin birth is a necessary qualification of anyone who enters its ministry.

Ultra-Fundamentalists, through D. Clarence Edward Macartney, asserted the "law and authority of the church will be upheld" if the New York Presbytery continues to license ministers, who do not accept in full all creedal and doctrinal beliefs of the church.

FALL RIVER MILLS' TREASURER RESIGNS

Fall River, May 27.—J. Edward Newton, treasurer of the Arkwright Mills, the operation of which has been curtailed for the last few months, offered his resignation at the meeting of the stockholders. He agreed, however, to continue in office until a definite plan for reorganization of the business has been agreed upon.

Announcement was made that a meeting of a special committee of nine stockholders will take place Friday to discuss methods for relieving existing conditions. A report on the corporation's financial condition will be submitted.

WOMAN UNABLE TO IDENTIFY SUSPECT

Two woman were summoned to Back Bay station today in an effort to identify Samuel Heller, twenty-four, of No. 85 Morehead street, Roxbury, arrested on suspicion of having been implicated in the theft of a $10,000 diamond ring from Kingsley's jewelry store, Boylston street, May 27. Mrs. Nellie Woorsley and Mrs. Gena Ashcroft, the latter of No. 462 Massachusetts avenue, viewed the suspect. One of the woman thought Heller resembled a man she saw smash a show window with a brick, snatch something and dash away. The other woman was unable to identify the prisoner. Heller was arrested by Patrolman Elliot of Dedham street and Pinkerton detectives.

BANDITS BESIEGE TOWN; BLOW OPEN BANK SAFE

Kentland, Ind., May 27 (A.P.)—Automobile bandits, estimated to number between eight and twelve, today besieged the town of Brook, home of George Ade, humorist, blew open the vault of the State Bank and escaped with approximately $2,500.

Telephone and telegraph wires leading out of the town were cut and the men proceeded in a leisurely manner to dynamite the vault. Frightened citizens were held at bay and were eye-witnesses to the robbery.

Members of the band patrolled the town, stopping all citizens, who ventured from their homes.

cars and trucks are constantly testing Atlantic Gasoline for you

When you fill up your tank with Atlantic Gasoline you get exactly the same fuel that propels this great fleet of cars and trucks.

Practically every type of motor and motor vehicle is represented. They travel thousands of miles daily. They encounter every speed, load, temperature, weather and road condition imaginable.

The performance of Atlantic Gasoline in these cars and trucks is watched constantly. Not only to insure the highest efficiency in their own operation. But so you may always have the rangiest, most dependable gasoline that can be produced.

Every factor that enters into the refining of gasoline and the operation of your car is searched to the core. Starting and pickup qualities, mileage and pulling power are carefully checked up. Carburetion, ignition, compression and combustion at different speeds and temperatures are minutely studied.

Atlantic Gasoline must always maintain its supremacy as a motor fuel. It must always be pure, clean and uniformly full-powered. It must be correct. It must have balance. It must serve you, not simply under favorable conditions, but under all of the conditions an automobile motor encounters.

The 5 Point Motor Fuel
1 Easier Starting
2 Quicker Pickup
3 Greater Power
4 Less Carbon
5 Maximum Mileage

Atlantic contains nothing to harm your motor. No sulphur to pit your valves. No acid to eat the metal of your motor or carburetor. No detonating fuel-knocks to pound your motor bearings. No rapid accumulation of carbon.

Keep your car running on Atlantic Gasoline. Let your motor become thoroughly accustomed to Atlantic's qualities. You'll be amply repaid. It will remain quiet-running, smooth-operating, full-powered longer. You'll pay out less money for carbon removing, valve-grinding, valve and piston-ring replacements. You'll be less "motor conscious"—better and better satisfied with your car—more and more appreciative of the pleasure it affords.

BRICKLEY WINS POINT IN STOCK FRAUD CASE

Counsel for Defense Seeks to Prove Ex-Grid Star Was Not Responsible in Case

Springfield, May 27 (I.N.S.).—An effort to show that Charles E. Brickley, former Harvard football star, was not personally responsible for the stock fraud charges with which he is accused was indicated today, the second day of the trial of Brickley in Superior Court.

Joseph B. Ely, defense counsel cross-examined William J. Hines, of Thompsonville Conn., whose accusation that Brickley misappropriated stock valued at $10,000 is the basis of the complaint.

Ely got from Hines an admission that the receipt for $7,000 advanced to Brickley to buy stock was signed by Gibson & Company, stock brokerage firm of Springfield, now defunct, and that the check was made out to Gibson Company. Ely also brought out that the receipt for other stock given by Hines as collateral was signed by Gibson & Company.

Hines also admitted that Brickley was the man who informed him that the stock certificates had been forged.

MACRI JUROR MAY BE DRIVEN FROM OFFICE

Townspeople Demand He Be Ousted as Tax Collector for Action at Trial

New Haven, Ct., May 27.—Public sentiment is at a high pitch in the little village of Orange, where Irving A. Andrew, only Macri juryman to hold out for a "guilty" verdict, has lived and held the position of tax collector for the past five years.

So incensed are Andrew's neighbors over the stand taken by him in one of the most prolonged and fiercely contested murder trials on record, that a petition is underway to oust him from his job as tax collector.

CITIZENS AROUSED.

Andrew, who is a Yale graduate, and has always held firm and unyielding opinions in Orange township meetings, did not greatly surprise his neighbors when they learned that he was the lone member of the jury to withhold the little singer's freedom, and hold to his own deeply rooted convictions long after the eleven other jurors had pleaded with him to give in to the will of the majority and allow them to return a verdict of "Not Guilty."

Constable Clark of Orange stating that he voiced the opinion of the majority of Orange inhabitants, declared that public sentiment was running so high against the attitude Andrew had taken in the trial, that he never would be returned to office when his term as tax collector expires this Fall. Women, more than the men of Orange, he declared, felt that Andrew had taken a "foolish, stubborn and unfair stand."

NOT SORRY.

Andrew interviewed as he returned from a visit to State Attorney Alling's office to protest against the publicity that has been given his action and to ask for protection against the wrath of New Haven and Orange people, said that he "was not sorry" for the stand he had taken and that "he would do it again" if he ever sat on a similar murder trial.

GERMANS GO TO AID RIFFIANS FIGHT FRENCH

Paris, May 27 (A.P.)—Information from sources which the French consider unimpeachable is to the effect that 147 young Germans, trained in various semi-military athletic organizations, have left Germany for Morocco by way of Spain to join Abd-El-Krim's troops. Some, it is said, will receive commissions, while the others will serve as non-commissioned officers.

A report from Tetuan, in the Spanish zone of Morocco, last night said reliable advices reported the presence at Tangier of a French Colonel to negotiate with Abd-El-Krim with a view to ending the Riffian offensive in the French zone. The same advices asserted that the French had lost more than 2,000 killed in the recent fighting.

TANGEMANS ARRIVE AT NEWPORT COTTAGE

Newport, R. I., May 27.—Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius H. Tangeman and Miss Violet Tangeman have arrived at their cottage on Narragansett avenue.

One of the most prominent families which will join the Summer colony for the first time this season is Mr. and Mrs. Henry Coleman Drayton of New York, who have rented "The Beeches" on Bellevue avenue, owned by Mrs. George Eustis Cocoran. Mrs. Drayton was Miss Constance Knower of an old Newport family. Mr. Drayton is a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Coleman Drayton, the latter the former Miss Charlotte Augusta Astor, daughter of William Astor.

Mr. and Mrs. William T. Aldrich of Boston are at the Muenchinger-King cottage, called here by the illness of their son, who is at St. George's School near Newport. The Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont soon will open and occupy Belcourt villa.

some insects, the harm done by others.

Without insects, for instance, there would be no blackberries.

WITHOUT bumble bees, as the Australians discovered, with amazement, you cannot have clover for your sheep. It would be easy to destroy all the insects in an orchard, but if you did that you would ruin the fruit crop. With insects, as with other animals, the dangerous kinds are in a minority. But the dangerous ones are very dangerous.

The insect zoological garden is much more important to human beings now than the old-fashioned kind. Men's dangerous enemies are no longer the wolves, lions, catamounts and snakes. Where wolves at their worst might kill 500 people in a year, one little demon of a microscopic life, the colon bacillus, carrying with it Asiatic cholera, will destroy millions of lives. The cave man hunted and ran away from the mammoth. Modern science hunts the ultra microscopic microbe, and the mystery back of cancer.

RUSSIA is worried about an alleged financial boycott, supposed to be engineered by English, French and German banks, to ruin Bolshevik trade.

The Russian revolution started, determined to "make money ridiculous." It succeeded admirably as regards Russian money, which went to nothing. But real money, for which men work, struggle, fight, cheat, lie, steal and go to war, hasn't lost its power. The Russians are realizing it.

HOWEVER, no financial boycott will have any real effect on Russian affairs. Russia can support herself. Her future depends on the Soviets' theories of government, and their ability to manage the millions of peasants, not on the will of any foreign bankers.

One thing is certain: If the Russian theories are wrong, the Russian government will fail.

UNCLE SAM says to Europe: "I would like my money back, please. I want to cut down taxes at home." Europe says in various ways, all polite. "Don't you wish you might get it?"

The British agreed to pay us in small instalments, to keep up their international credit. But British officials that made the arrangement are rebuked by their fellow citizens.

"Why, in Heaven's name, pay your debts to Uncle Sam?" is the question in Europe.

IT WILL be a long time before those ten thousand million dollars come back. The important thing is not the water that has gone over the wheel, not the money that was pumped out of American pockets into the European war under Woodrow Wilson. What is important is to learn the lesson and avoid future pumping.

Yankees' First Offensive in France Complete Failure; a Great Disappointment to Pershing, Bullard Writes

AS THESE are personal memoirs of Experiences, the pronoun "I" can never be out of sight. I am not offering these memories as absolute fact, but as my impression and belief at the time. —R. L. BULLARD.

HOW the Yankees failed completely in their first attack on the German trenches, after two months of intensive preparation, is told today by General Bullard in his memoirs. Pershing's disappointment and how they turned this setback to advantage also is revealed.

THE point of our own trenches at which our troops were to start and the point at which in the enemy's trenches we were to direct our efforts were very carefully selected after great thought, and then both systems of trenches were carefully laid out and dug and their wire actually put upon some spot far back of our own lines in order to make a ground maneuver for practice of the actual thing as it was to be done. It took at least two weeks' work to prepare for a single raid, and the men who were to execute it were perhaps one-half of the number who were employed in the preparation

When the enemy's ditches and our own ditches had been carefully completed for the practice raid, our own men were put in the trenches, each man in exactly the spot from which he was going to depart in the real trenches far to the front, and then at the given signal they went over the top, employing exactly the same methods and movements in the sham battle that they were expected to employ in the real fight, including the methods of passing our own wire entanglements and the enemy's. This was many times repeated till every man knew his part.

For the first raid, involving from thirty to sixty men on our side, a whole division staff and all the headquarters were interested and concerned. And after all this planning and work the first one, when it came to actual execution, was a complete failure. A single engineer party had not practiced carrying the long tubes of explosives from the dump through the approach trenches to the spot where they were to be used. The tube broke and it took a half-hour longer than the time set for the execution of the raid, and our own men never left our trenches. It was a sad disappointment.

General Pershing had come to be a witness of the first effort and he, too, was disappointed. But he knew that but one in three or four raids ever succeeded, and he was not critical; the experience would not be lost.

In our first raids volunteers had been taken; in our subsequent ones those whose duty it was at the time to execute it. Nor were long, elaborate preparations now necessary, the whole command got the correct idea in the first trials

From this, skill increased until its culmination, it seemed to me, was reached in one in which a raiding party of my own old regiment, caught between its own and the enemy's barrage, crawled between the two to success and out again

SUB POSTAL STATIONS IN ARMS

Protest Bakers' Ban on Saturday Deliveries; Urge Severance From Boston

Outlying sub-stations of the Boston postal district are uniting in a protest to Postmaster Baker at Boston over the latest edict, which dispenses with Saturday afternoon deliveries of mail by carriers.

The business sections of the suburban cities are affected, as well as the residential districts.

Closing postoffices in these suburbs two hours earlier than formerly, curtailing carrier deliveries and now shutting off Saturday afternoon deliveries, residents charge that the service given is much poorer than it was a quarter of a century ago.

There is a movement on foot to have all suburban stations which existed with the Boston postoffice about twenty-five years ago, set apart again as separate postoffices and a beginning along this line is expected to be made in the next session of Congress by several Massachusetts Congressmen whose districts are affected.

APPEAL TO DISTRICT ATTORNEY

Charge George W. Bagge Put Away $5,488 on Yearly Salary of $2,200

Malden City Council wants to know how C. George W. Bagge, who was building inspector until December 24, put $5,488.59 in the bank last year, while his salary was $2,200.

A resolution to that effect was adopted by the council at its regular meeting. It was presented by Fletcher S. Hyde, the president.

In the resolution was embodied a suggestion that the District Attorney make it his business to find out.

Mr. Bagge resigned his post on December 24. He was retired on pension, by order of Mayor John V. Klimkiewicz.

Councilmen objected to his getting a retiring allowance, maintaining that he was paid more than $600 a year from other sources and was not entitled to one.

Inspector Bagge testified, it is alleged, that he had only a negligible income in addition to his salary.

Two of the other bills brought in during the week show that he deposited $6,685.31 in the First National Bank of Malden in 1924.

In presenting his resolution for an investigation of the accounts of the inspectional department for the last few years, Mr. Hyde said "there had been rumors."

Worker Escapes Death; Gets Indigestion

Trapped in the swiftly revolving belt of a turbine engine in the Boston Elevated power station in Roxbury, Richard O'Toole, an oiler, escaped with merely an attack of indigestion.

Fellow workers had fearful visions of a horrible death for the oiler as the belt picked him up. O'Toole, who is forty-five years old, and lives at No. 46 East Third street, Cambridge, however, was born under a lucky star.

He was patched into the air. City Hospital sent him home with a dose of bicarbonate of soda.

New York, May 27.—"Rotten. Rotten. Rotten. That's how these times compare with the old days."

Harry K. Thaw, speaking. He banned Times wrinkles as the tax on the taste of flaming Central Park lights as the symbol of a new day. He waxed somewhat wild over the gay Broadway and through the Roaring Forties—perhaps the wildest decade Harry has spent since he won a lump of the wild oats sown by many years of his shorter, Stanford White, under the mill bridge. Yep. Mr. Thaw is getting old. He says so himself. He says he is getting old. He says he is getting old. He says he is getting old

With admirable local talent the combined lodges of B'nai B'rith presented their theatrical offering, Miss Cinderella to an appreciative and large audience at the Boston Opera House.

A musical comedy with modern snap and go, so much a matter of fact with comedies, "Miss Cinderella" continued at a galloping pace all the way through. Not a dull moment was experienced. Especially to be complimented on portrayal of roles are Ada Schlager, Venetta Brody, Sophia Shawmut, Celia Cohan and Dorothy Miller.

RECORD IN VETS' DRIVE IS EXPECTED IN STATE

"Every body is pulling for Massachusetts with the biggest quota so far started to make a record the country will be proud of," was a telegram received here today from American Legion national headquarters at Indianapolis, congratulating Massachusetts Legion officials for the progress they have made in the state drive for a half million dollar [illegible] ment fund.

Early reports here today indicated the sunset gun tonight would see the total raised up to the $30,000 mark. This is the third day of the drive. The State committee is sending telegrams to small posts in an effort to bring the total to $200,000 by Saturday night.

The Metropolitan Firemen's Post of Boston will conduct the ceremonies and fire the sunset gun at the Boston Common flagpole at 5:30 today.

FULLER NAMES HOVEY BANK COMMISSIONER

Roy A. Hovey of Wakefield was appointed State Bank Commissioner today by Governor Fuller.

He will succeed Joseph C. Allen, who resigned two weeks ago to take a position with a downtown trust company.

Mr. Hovey has been deputy bank commissioner since 1922. Born in Stoneham, he finished high school and went to work for the Wilder Savings Bank of Boston. He was appointed an assistant to the bank commissioner later to become a bank examiner.

He resigned from that post to become an examiner for the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston. In 1920 he became State director of a chain of trust companies.

ITALY NOW UNABLE TO PAY WAR DEBT TO U. S.

Rome, May 27 (A.P.)—Protests that Italy is at present unable to pay her war debts to the United States were made today by the newspaper Messaggero. Intense general interest in the question of settlement of war debts continues.

The Messaggero argued that Italy's present financial condition would not permit her to pay even the interest on her debt without serious consequences to her domestic financial structure. The newspapers asserted even payments stretched over a period of three generations would be a tremendous strain upon Italy's resources.

TRAINING CAMP TALK ON WEEI

Tonight, over WEEI, at 7:30 Colonel Blanton Winship, of the Judge Advocates General's Department, U. S. A., is going to be interviewed by our old friend Will on the subject of the Citizens' Military Training Camps.

"The purpose of the camps," Colonel Winship, in his office at the Army Base, "is to train the young manhood of America to better citizenship by the mental, moral, and physical discipline of military training. Any good American between the ages of 17 and 31, of good health and of good character, is eligible. The course lasts thirty days. The expense to the applicant is absolutely nothing. The Government furnishes everything free, clothes, food, medical attention, laundry and railroad fare to and from the camp.

"The President is now in [illegible] Camp Devens, and only a few days ago the President issued the following statement from the White House.

"These camps are now a vital part of our plan of national security. The ready obedience to law and respect for the institutions of a well ordered society. The training has helped to health, morals, and mental excellence. Love and reverence for flag and country are the natural outcomes of the training. Courtesy in act and speech, kindness, and tolerance in thought are the [illegible].

"The President's son is setting a good example. Listen in on WEEI tonight and get the details.

RADIO ABSORBS SMALL SHARE OF POWER

Combine all the power used by the broadcasting stations in every land and it is virtually nothing, electrically speaking, when estimated in conjunction with the total consumption of electrical power the world over.

No less than 328,000,000,000 kilowatt hours of electricity are consumed each year. Of this the United States produces and uses just about half.

There are in the United States and Canada 106 lighting, power and electric railway companies, having a yearly output each of 100,000,000 kilowatt hours. The Niagara Falls Power Company in 1924 reached the enormous figure of 2,359,462,874 kilowatt hours, with an average load of 325,419 kilowatts. The Commonwealth Edison Company and the Edison United Companies, New York, give peak loads in kilowatts of 717,000 and 618,283 respectively.

"It will thus be seen," declares Joseph D. R. Freed, president of the Freed-Eisemann Radio Corporation, "that we are far away from the era "But then, who knows, we may be of superpower in broadcasting able to achieve amazing results in broadcasting by improved instruments using very little power.

"No man can foretell just what the next ten years will reveal in this marvelous science of radio."

MORE HINTS ABOUT REDUCING DIETS.

Those of you who have really been limiting yourselves to 1200 calories a day, along the reducing squad, started have certainly learned one thing and that is—self-control. Anyone who goes on a diet for even one day, or plans to fit for a week, a month or a year is giving an exhibition of self-control that is the real article. She has become the master of her fate and the captain of her stomach. Most of us not only eat too much, but as a rule, our food is too rich as well as too highly seasoned.

Reducing menus should contain lots of fruit, much of it raw, and many of the simpler salads. No one need worry about vitamines if they eat plenty of fresh green stuff and fruit. Raw ground. Eat plenty of lettuce, raw cabbage and carrots, also a of all kinds, oranges, apples, lemons, etc., and you will get all the vitamines you need.

Remember, that while wheat flour is more healthful than white, and has no [illegible] to sugar for sweetening, [illegible] while cereals are [illegible] vitamines, they are [illegible].

It is one of the curses of civilization that everything is getting too refined. [illegible] we can get to food in [illegible] prepared it, the better we are.

MEAT ONCE DAILY.

Meat once a day is enough for all except those who work hard out of doors all day, and there should be one meatless day a week for every body. It wouldn't do any harm if two meatless days are observed out of the seven. You know there are plenty of foods that contain proteins besides meat. I am not talking about a vegetarian diet. The true vegetarian does not eat anything that has ever lived, not even the dumb and lowly oyster.

Fish is a valuable item on reducing diets and in spite of the fact that I have been broadcasting a year, I think [illegible] still means to some of you, a can of salmon for a hurry [illegible] dessert, creamed tuna for a Sunday night supper, or sardines for picnics or a codfish ball on Sunday mornings, or maybe a shrimp salad for luncheon.

Now meat can be cheaper than meat. The navy tribe is healthful and [illegible]. It is easy to cook, easy to serve, and easy to use the leftovers.

PEAS AND BEANS.

Peas and beans in various combinations make excellent meat substitutes, and [illegible] there is cheese with them [illegible] delicously with so many of the [illegible] which can be added to [illegible] or salad course, and [illegible] can be served in dozens of different ways.

BROADCASTING MIDDLE AGES

The President of the Dayton Progressive Club is considering erection of a monument to [illegible] so that the whole nation may sit in on the forth coming trial of a young teacher by the State for teaching the theory of evolution in the public schools. Progress is unevenly distributed among the various elements of our civilization. We can have a trial that is a reminder of the superstitions of the middle ages—and broadcast it by radio, the marvel of modern science. If they were trying young Mr. Scope for witchcraft they would be just a little more old-fashioned than they are now—but not much.

This Day in History

THIS is the anniversary of the fourth battle of the Aisne, in 1918. It was on the Aisne that the Germans took their stand after being thrown back at the Marne, and then and there inaugurated trench warfare.

WITH BULLARD IN THE WORLD WAR

A. E. F. Chief Tells Tale of Brave Yanks

to safety with the loss of one man and the capture of thirty and killing perhaps of as many more of the enemy. Astonishing sometimes how soon men become warriors if not killed in the becoming!

The French corps and army commander under whom we were serving at last became quite complimentary. "The Americans took prisoners upon call," they said. Of course this was, for politeness, a bit exaggerated, but it was nearly true.

Clemenceau Pays Yankees Visit

CHAPTER XV.

Sightseers of all kinds were down upon us daily, American major generals and their staffs, newspaper men, Red Cross men, visiting United States government officials, staff officers, moving picture men—everybody that could reach France. I think it very likely that the enemy discovered us as quickly by these wandering groups of visitors as by our irresistible inclination to shoot.

The war-skilled French and English knew how to conceal such visitors. We had not yet learned. However the enemy began evidently to enjoy the visitors also, because he began playfully to drop shells around them when on their trips they tried to get into the front-line trenches.

[illegible] together with the irritation of our advance troops over being shot at for sightseers caused an abatement and restraint to be put upon the visitors. But all of this was a part of the game. In a month we had learned it and we could handle visitors with as much ease as the best railroad handles its passengers. In this way we put through their sight-seeing, and we ourselves had the chance to see a dozen at least of our own general officers who were afterward to distinguish themselves in the great World War.

Among them, too, came French officials especially interested in Americans, principal of these, most friendly and deeply interested the Premier of France, Clemenceau, the "Tiger," savior of French honor and of French national unity. He came in mid Winter, a plain short, stocky man carrying many years lightly, wearing a heavy grayish moustache and very plain clothes. He was yellow, but the yellowness did not seem to come from ill health. He was old, but looked no such years as he was said to carry.

French Devise New Trench System

As time was passing. In 1918, rumors, growing all the time more numerous and direct, came to us of a great German offensive in the early Spring. As by this time the enemy would be reinforced by all of his troops that had formerly been employed against the Russians, these rumors unquestionably caused the Allies much apprehension. To meet this threatened drive the French, with whom we were serving, devised a new system of trench defence, and began to put it in effect. It consisted in placing the line of real resistance to enemy attack beyond the reach of his minenwerfers, thus forcing him to attack the first line with his heavy minenwerfers, and then to bring up these minenwerfers under fire of our artillery to attack the second or real line of resistance.

Our time was very largely consumed for two months and a half in the construction of the trenches, dugouts and defences under this system. At the same time, the weather, from the middle of January to the first of April was continuously wet and snowy and men and officers were in the mud day and night.

The cold was not very great and our men were reasonably protected against it by trench stoves, which were found in sufficient quantity in the trenches or were furnished by the American army after our arrival.

This work, as I have before said never appeared sufficiently necessary to our men, nor had they had sufficient experience in war to make them do it with a good will. Nevertheless, it was done. The constant movement of parts of the command into the forward trenches, out again, and into the rear trenches and rest areas prevented for a long time effectual supervision of our new troops where they were living.

Consequently, sanitary regulations and observances sometimes suffered neglect. Fortunately the difference in climate between the United States and France was very marked. Neglect of sanitary arrangements so deadly there seemed almost harmless here, especially in Winter. Notwithstanding what I considered great carelessness of the French in this respect, they had managed to keep alive their great army for three years. They were, sanitarily, much worse than we at our worst; but our worst did not last long. As soon as we were really informed of the neglects, a strong organization and stringent rules and inspections were established and enforced their observance. Discipline secured the result.

Discipline, indeed, was becoming strong. An illustration:

"Is this a real gas alarm or is it a gas drill?" asked one of my staff officers one day, near the front line, of a soldier who was busy putting on his mask at a gas alarm.

"Put on your mask," mumbled the soldier from behind his own mask, "put on your mask, you damn fool, and don't ask questions." Here was the real thing in discipline. He was teaching it to the officer, who, however, he had not, in the falling darkness, recognized as such. I was never able to find this young man or I would have raised him to be promoted.

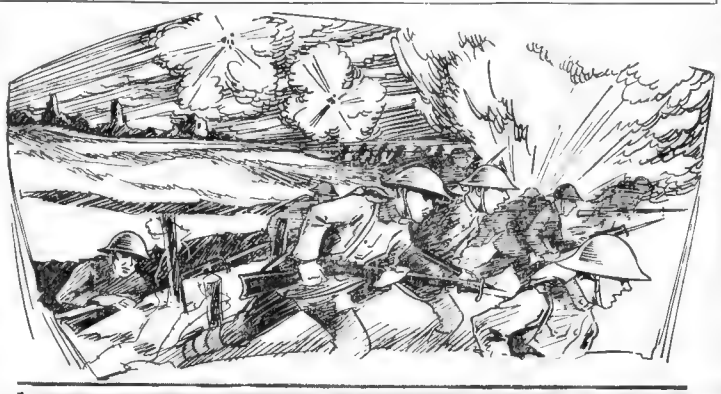
How First Raid of Yanks in France Failed

"FROM this, skill increased until its culmination, it seemed to me, was reached in one in which a raiding party of my old regiment, caught between its own and the enemy's barrage, crawled between the two to success and out again to safety, with the loss of one man and the capture of thirty and the killing, perhaps, of as many more of the enemy."—Bullard.



"It was a sad disappointment," said General Bullard. An inexperienced engineer party was unable to get the explosives to the spot where they were to be used, in time, so our men never left the trenches. Picture shows them eager and waiting to go over the top. (International Newsreel.)

DAILY SHORT STORY

"CHIEF!" began Mayor Baker as Chief of Police O'Day settled himself gingerly into the chair the mayor had placed for him. "I'm not going to beat around the bush this morning. I want some action in that department of yours, and I want it quick.

"I'm sick and tired of the lawlessness and crime that's going on in this city. In the five days so far this week, [illegible] have experienced one murder, six hold-ups in the downtown district, an attempted bank robbery that was frustrated only through the vigilance of the bank's employes, not the police, and now this highly successful robbery at Attorney Rankin's last night.

"The police have done nothing but pick up a poor bum on suspicion. The city is a rendezvous for crooks. Why man, the newspapers have even printed some of their names for you!"

"The newspapers can go to—" broke in the Chief, angry because he had been sent for by the new mayor only two months in office and still trying to run the city all by himself, but angrier still because he was being bawled out for the operation of his pet department.

"You're right, chief. The newspapers can go—to the people—they are the only medium through which the public can know of the doings of the administration, and its shortcomings, and this morning, sir, you will receive from me a written request that the Mayor's committee on crime investigate changes in the personnel of police if some real results are not shown in this robbery case within the next thirty six hours.

"Don't get me wrong, O'Day, this is the start of a real clean up. The fact that Rankin was my former law partner doesn't enter into it."

O'Day's face had set in a horrible grimace as he said slowly, "I wouldn't be in too much of a hurry with that statement. Maybe some folks wouldn't like it at all."

"Here's a little secret, chief; you may wish to pass it around. In my safe here is an accumulation of documents that I may decide to publish. Ninety-nine per cent of the people of this community would read it gleefully. One per cent—which includes at least one chief of police—would give a great deal to keep it where it is.

Still Have a Chance.

"However, I am interested mainly in the present and future of our executives, so you fellows still have a chance to atone for some things. Good morning, chief."

Back in his own office after a very long and very guarded telephone conversation, during which O'Day received instructions to make good regarding the robbery, but to be careful how he did it, the chief summoned and received bullet-proof alibis from half a dozen or so of the more notorious of this city's underworld characters. He learned nothing of value.

Then he called the entire plainclothes detail before him and read the Mayor's statement to the newspapers and finished up by demanding the robber or some likely robber before sundown. Within an hour, he received a tip that "Pretty" Blake was in town. In another hour Mr. Blake sat before him, but the chief was unable to break down the perfect alibi.

Right Track

"Pretty" insisted that he was in town to see about an inheritance but refused to volunteer any further information. When questioned by the chief, however, he did admit that certain credentials which he had to present to the firm of Rankin & Baker, had not been satisfactory to the partner who had since become Mayor, and he had waited five years for the partnership to dissolve before re-applying.

At this O'Day brightened. The right track at last, he was sure. He smiled inwardly when Blake professed ignorance and surprise at the recitation of the robbery at Rankin's. The chief breathed freely for the first time in many hours, but almost swallowed his tongue when he realized that "Pretty" was not only still talking but was saying something—between hearty chuckles—about being with Mr. Rankin until three o'clock in the morning—long after the robbery took place.

O'Day was nonplussed, but not so far gone as the expression on his face belied. His mind was racing. It was working against time, now, and at last it formulated what to him was a possible solution, considering the man in front of him, still chuckling to himself. Cautiously O'Day peered up and down the corridor and closed the door before speaking.

"Listen to me, Blake; you want to settle down in this town as an upright citizen, but don't forget some of us know you've got a 'rep.' You may not be here long enough to collect that legacy if you're not careful. Now, I've got a little scheme in mind, which, if you'll come in on, will make you a little [illegible] by mornin', thanks to a gang of good fellows who would do right in running you out otherwise."

Mr. Blake, knowing well the vagaries of police chiefs, shrugged his shoulders and lit a cigar.

"School," was his only answer.

At the Road House.

O'Day lowered his voice and talked earnestly and softly for several minutes. Finally they pushed back their chairs and Pretty departed.

Out on the turnpike in "Happy's" roadhouse Chief of Police O'Day sat nervously drumming the table top in a little secluded stall.

Midnight had passed and he listened eagerly and anxiously for an expected footstep approaching his hiding place. Had something gone wrong? No that was out of the question. The courthouse was covered by men he knew he could trust.

Maybe that fool Mayor had suspected his move and had his own guards out. Or maybe Baker was there himself. Suppose they caught Blake and forced a confession out of him. But Blake generously put an end to his despair by sauntering in just then and pushing the door shut with his foot.

"Did you make it all right, Blake?" he asked anxiously.

"No trouble at all. You sure do treat your burglars handsomely here chief. A royal job, I call it. You promised to fix everything and you certainly did a good job. Rob the mayor's safe under police protection. Why you even furnished a car and chauffeur. Did you see the boss?

"Yes, he thought five grand was about right. Here it is."

"And here is your pocket. For five thousand dollars, Chief O'Day you are buying evidence that Mayor Baker might have used against you."

"Hush, you fool. You don't know who is in that next booth," hoarsely whispered O'Day.

"Oh, yes, I do," said Blake, as he opened the connecting door. It's just Mayor Baker, a stenographer and a couple of cops, that's all.

Bit Beautifully.

"O'Day," said His Honor, "you bit beautifully. That Rankin job was a stall. I had to have something to goad your crooked bunch with, and didn't dare wait another day for fear some real robbery would bob up. I never had a scrap of paper against you, either."

"Well, what did 'Pretty' here steal then," asked the bewildered chief weakly.

"When you go back to write out your resignation, look up Blake's record. You'll find, I think, that he won't be out for eight years yet.

MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE

By Helen Rowland

Helen Rowland

NO matter how many "leading ladies" a man may have in his life he always likes to think that there are a few "extras" waiting around, too.

* * *

Nowadays a young couple spend ten seconds getting acquainted, ten days falling in love, ten minutes getting married and ten years wondering why they did it.

* * *

A business girl makes the most comfortable sort of wife, because after a few years around the average office she is afflicted with no illusions about the masculine sex for her husband to live up to.

* * *

Just supposing there WERE such a thing as the fiery and masterful "sheik" of fiction! And supposing you found one! And "supposing" that he fell in love with you, instead of with a Follies girl! Do you still suppose you could stand him "sheiking" around the house for more than a week?

* * *

Real love is what makes you actually enjoy kissing the bald spot on top of your husband's head.

* * *

Many a girl is tempted to marry by observing a beautiful solicitude and tenderness with which a man caters to the whims and caprices of his motor car.

* * *

After you've been married three weeks you begin to plan for your wedding anniversary; after you've been married three years, you have to put a cross-mark on the calendar to remember when it is.

* * *

It is safe to make a man feel that he is loved, that he is admired, that he is lucky—but never that he is indispensable!

* * *

Making love without any real sentiment is about as thrilling as sitting in a motor car and pretending to drive when the gasoline is out.

* * *

Sometimes about all the "companionship" a woman gets out of marriage is that which emanates from the clock and the cat.

Why They Made a Present to the Zoo

By Foxy Grandpa

I THOUGHT I heard a noise. But I wasn't sure, because the wind was blowing through the trees of the north woods where we were tramping, and that is often deceiving.

"Somebody's in trouble," said Bunny. "Follow me. It's over this way," and away he darted like a flash.

We hurried to Bunny, and there lying on the ground was a poor little animal. We saw at a glance that it was only a baby. But you will never guess what kind of a baby it was. A baby wolf.

"Its leg is broken," murmured Bunny.

"Poor little thing," whispered Bobby.

I almost choked as I saw the sad eyes of the wounded baby look up into my face. There was an appeal in those eyes I shall never forget. And what a cute little fel low he was!

"We'll take him right home," said I.

Carefully I picked the baby wolf up and nestled him comfortably in the crook of my arm and carried him so that his poor leg would not be jostled about.

We got back to our camp—where we had been spending the Summer—and then I began practising first aid.

I put the broken leg of our baby wolf in a splint and bound it up tightly. Then we fed him a saucer of nice warm milk and put him in a box on a soft, old blanket.

For days he lay there, and soon he came to know us when we drew near to him, and would lick our hands like a puppy. We could see him grow, too.

Then, one day, he stood up on his leg, and in a short while off came the splint and that little fel low was frisking around like a kitten.

"You're some doctor," laughed Bunny, as Bobby played with the healed patient.

The Summer passed and the wolf grew. It was getting quite large now, but showed no savage tendencies at all. He was as gentle as a pet dog and we were very fond of him.

"You're not going to leave him when we go home, Foxy Grandpa?" demanded Bunny.

"Why, certainly," I replied. "Although I shall miss the little fellow and hate to leave him, he's quite well now and no doubt will enjoy being back in the forest with his friends and relatives."

"Nothing like that," said Bunny, shaking his head.

"What do you mean?" I asked quickly.

"Wolves never return to their wild state if they are tamed when young, Foxy Grandpa. That fellow wouldn't know how to take care of himself now if he were turned loose."

"Then there is only one thing we can do, Bunny," said I. "We'll take him home and present him to the zoo."

"That's a wise decision, Foxy Grandpa," said Bunny, looking at me like a judge.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

THE clouds hang low, the wind is keen and in a yellow glare the suppliant trees, wind-bowed, are seen by lightning's fitful flare. Unrest and strife walk down the world, the waves rise mountain-high, and flags of tempest are unfurled across the sombre sky. And yet I go upon my way, undaunted, undismayed, secure as though the sunlight lay on paths where Summer strayed. Because the care that guards my way will never fail or cease, as close by night as in the day, unchanged in storm or peace. The ravings of the tempest fall unheeded on my ears; in vain the Furies shriek and call; for me, no doubts or fears; for me, no timorous retreat, no panic or alarm, the Lamp that lights my climbing feet shines on, through calm or storm.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By John P. Medbury

A WELL-KNOWN judge says that a kiss is legal if the girl doesn't put up a fight. The average girl will fight a little, but down in her heart she's hoping that the man will win the battle.

A GIRL'S lips are her private property and she has a perfect right to pick her own trespassers.

IF she doesn't want to kiss you she'll say no. And if she does want to she'll say she'll say the same thing.

IN the feminine vocabulary "No" is the synonym of "Yes."

A FELLOW can hug a girl as much as he wants until he sees the "Stop" signal in her eyes.

IF you ignore it, he'll father to liable to come in and give you a ticket.

ANY man can be a traffic cop in his own parlor.

HE'S liable to pop in unexpectedly and tell you to pull over to the side of the couch.

THEN he'll bawl you out for facing in the wrong direction on a one-way sofa.

HE might be useless at a street corner, but he knows how to regulate traffic on his own furniture.

HE has a right to place a speed limit on his morris chair.

YOU may be wealthy but that's no sign he'll let his daughter sit in the lap of luxury.

NOW that kissing is legal a lot of men will take advantage of the law.

IT'S nice to know that we can spoon without the aid of an attorney.

LAWYERS should come after marriage, not before.

A PAIR of luscious lips can outwit any legal mind.

IF some girls sued every man who kissed them, court rooms would look like subways.

NEW YORK State wouldn't be big enough. The judge would have to hold the trial in Texas.

REALISM

Now we find out that the Hesperus wasn't wrecked. It's a tough break. It's more childhood illusions cracked. But what of it? The rhymes still go good at the annual commencement exercises, where tears still fall for the poor skipper's daughter.

Nothing is real in this depraved age except the income tax, and the bill collectors. Horatius didn't have any bridge to guard. Geo. Wash never saw a cherry tree. Paul Revere didn't know the front end of a horse, and Phil Sheridan pioned to Winchester.

Next thing you know the boys will be telling us that there is no prohibition.

LITTLE SKETCHES

Here are the Mohr sisters, Annie and Nora, who have been entombed in the Hall of Fame. Annie, it has been divulged, is the gentler Mohr of the two, signing all those pieces in which Nora writes "Dungee" on the typewriter of Tombs. They are now busy on a novel entitled "Lethal," which will, it is believed, be the Summer's best seller. Both girls are beautiful, but have turned down requests for fees for their hands. They'd rather play "ten." "The Mohr we have, be the Mohr we want," is their slogan.

SHORT STORY

The four social leaders of the exclusive suburban residential section started to be thrown together at the auction table at the weekly bridge of the Community Club. All was peace and harmony. They forgot trumps, as they played deftly, chatting on a new, following suit, making no mistakes whatsoever.

"I'll have to stop playing," suddenly exclaimed Mrs. Bubblington-Sibley, oldest of them all. "I forgot to mail my check for the Church Fund."

"Goody," exclaimed Mrs. Hetherington-Gush, Mrs. Heffernon-Gab and Mrs. Kinky-Piffle in unison. "Take ours and put them in with yours in your name. It will make you look so much more generous."

And they handed her their letters.

FINANCE

—By B. C. Forbes—

Organized labor, for some reason or other, is making more rapid progress in launching banks than in launching business enterprises.

So far, labor bankers have escaped the price usually paid by beginners. It is one thing to launch a ship and sail it on a smooth sea, and another thing to keep the ship afloat and safe when terrible storms arise. Most of America's labor banks are being conducted conservatively, but it will be a tremendous misfortune if all labor banks do not get on the right track and forge ahead to success.

As remarked in this column the other day, President Coolidge, in a letter to Peter J. Brady, president of the Federation Bank of New York, on the occasion of its second birthday, emphasized the importance of exercising the most scrupulous care in handling investments. It may or may not be that President Coolidge's attention has been drawn to the activities of one or two labor banks now under able management as the Federation Bank.

* * *

This Federation Bank is a unique institution. Instead of serving only one union, and being dominated solely by members of one union, the Federation Bank of New York is owned and controlled by ten international unions and over 100 local unions in and around New York City, representing all branches of the labor movement.

More than forty active international unions and over 400 local unions are today using the Federation Bank for their financial transactions.

No union now permitted to acquire more than twenty-five shares and no individual more than ten shares of the 1,000 shares, so that no one little clique can dominate it.

To insure that it will always remain a labor bank, the proviso was made that a majority of the directors always must be identified with unions in good standing in the American Federation of Labor.

* * *

The growth of the bank has astounded everybody—except, perhaps, President Brady, who from the start had big visions and initiative faith. Opened only two years ago with $500,000 resources, it now has resources of more than $11,000,000, a record rarely equalled by banks established by "capitalistic" interests.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, in a birthday letter to President Brady, said:

"The steady growth of this institution, both in financial resources and in the confidence of the business world, is a source of great satisfaction to all of us who realize the significance of this new venture in banking . . . in encouraging saving and sound investment, your are helping to make conditions better generally and to achieve in this country something approximating that 'equality of opportunity,' which is the nearest practical approach to an ideal state of society."

* * *

The suggestion is here offered that those in charge of other labor banks visit the Federation bank with a view to obtaining valuable hints as to how to run such institutions on good, successful lines.

ROCKLAND BANK TO OPEN DOORS ON JUNE 1

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

Another important step forward in Boston's banking history will be taken when the former National Rockland Bank of Roxbury, incorporated in 1855, now the National Rockland Bank, opens doors downtown June 1 in the State Mutual Building, No. 55 Congress street. Demand for the new stock at $350 a share is said to be heavy.

* * *

New directors elected to the National Rockland's board include Roger Amory, trustee; Henry G. Lapham, chairman Ventura Consolidated Oil Fields; Ralph E. Thompson, vice-president Gillette Safety Razor Co.; Bayard Tuckerman of Obrion, Russell & Co.; John E. Thayer, Jr., trustee and president of Clinton Trust Co.; John Gaston, trustee, Roxbury Institution for Savings and director Cargill Trust Co. of Putnam, Ct.; Fred L. Morgan of Morgan, Cragin & Weeks, on Chicago West, treasurer of Roxbury Institution for Savings. Robert G. Rugg, recently elected with the National Shawmut Bank, was elected a new vice-president.

William Nelson Kenyon, assistant cashier of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, has also been elected vice-president of the National Rockland. C. Henry, Jr., has been made assistant cashier.

I met James Fayne, formerly of Boston, now of the New York office of Hornblower & Weeks, on a visit here this week, looking in excellent health. Mr. Fayne has won an enviable reputation in stock market circle in the "big town."

Department of Public Utilities lifts the ban laid April 28 on the sale of nearly a quarter of a hundred securities because the companies had failed to file satisfactory information with the department. There seems justice in the claim of brokers and business men that neglect to file information should not be accepted as "evidence of fraud. The good character of numerous companies that have operated more than a decade is alone sufficient to demonstrate that some change is needed. The problem would work out all right if the public were so that companies might be merely suspended from trading until the information was supplied without any sale of the word "fraud." It would also be a partial remedy for the situation if the none too expeditious method of securing data by the department were promptly supplied.

George F. Redmond, former Deronshire street financier, is a frequent visitor at brokerage offices. There are many stories concerning stocks in which Mr. Redmond is supposed to be interested, and I am sure some of them would make him smile.

Cotton mill expansion seems still to be confined to the South. At Galveston, Massachusetts and Texas capital will start a large cotton factory, the Galvez Cotton Mills to be the name, and $850,000 to be the capitalization. This company is to instal 14,000 spindles for yarn production. Its engineer-architect is Charles T. Main of Boston. Three tons will initially be used. Copeland, president of the Textile Securities Corporation at Fort Worth, B. D. Barker of Boston, F. W. Nichols of Taunton, R. C. Stone and H. G. Carroll of Galveston.

At Jacksonville, Fla., the Hamilton Manufacturing Company will be organized to build a cotton mill. The plant is planned to occupy a site containing sixty acres, and an amount approximating $1,500,000 is concerned in the project.

BOSTON & MAINE HAS GOOD APRIL SHOWING

In spite of somewhat smaller gross earnings than last year, due entirely to a decline in passenger business, Boston & Maine in April had net operating income of $808,747 against $586,716 in April, 1924, an increase of 37.9 per cent., and surplus after interest charges and rentals of $235,376 comparing with a deficit of $3,046 last year. This is indicative of the saving going on in operating economies has on the expense accounts and various economies which are being effected.

Operating expenses for the month were reduced $336,555, or 6.2 per cent., whereas gross revenue was off only $82,685. The reduction in operating expenses was due chiefly to a cut in transportation expenses, amounting to $294,111, or 9.2 per cent., reflecting efficiency of operation. Equipment maintenance expenses were reduced somewhat from last year. Ratio of operating expenses to gross was only 79.62 per cent. against 83.85 per cent. in April, 1924.

BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, MAY 27, 1925

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

First home of the shoe industry in America, Lynn leads the country in the manufacture of women's shoes, cut stock and other shoe findings. More than 100 Lynn firms are engaged in the shoe business.

A patriot town from the very beginning, Lynn from first to last furnished 500 soldiers to the Revolutionary Army. Scores of Lynn boys were seasoned veterans at 15. One, Daniel Walls, enlisted at 12!

Lynn, Her Minute Men in Command, Makes Ready for the Coming of the President

BEFORE VISITING WHITE COURT

SHOULD THESE LINES happen to meet the eye of any manufacturer of yachts, yardsticks or yarn, he is advised to get in touch with Mr. John R. Hurlburt of the Lynn Chamber of Commerce, at present housed in the Security Trust Building, facing Central square.

"At present housed" because, as all the world should know by this time, the Lynn Chamber of Commerce is about to surrender its commodious offices to the President of the United States.

The present year will be known forever in the history of Lynn as the "Coolidge year."

Our New England President will enjoy his Summer vacation, if his home folks will do everything in their power to see that he is spared annoyance, at White Court in Swampscott, about a mile and a half from these Chamber of Commerce offices in Central square, Lynn.

The President's Lynn establishment will correspond to the executive offices in Washington. Here the secretaries, stenographers, Secret Service men and other attaches will make their headquarters. Here will come all persons who feel that they have business with the President of the United States of sufficient importance to warrant disturbing him in the course of the first vacation he will have permitted himself in two arduous and difficult years.

At Lynn will be spoken the word which will determine whether the visitor is to move on to Swampscott.

President Coolidge's Great Need

The one thousand New England Minute Men who make up the extremely prompt and progressive Lynn Chamber of Commerce are determined that, in so far as they can bring it to pass, President Coolidge and Mrs. Coolidge will enjoy an untroubled Summer.

Even before the evening newspapers of Saturday last appeared, with their bulletins of the first indisposition that has affected the President this year, one of the directors of the Chamber had arrived home from a visit to the White House with the report that what is most desired by the President and Mrs. Coolidge when they come home for the Summer is "genuine rest."

To use Mr. Ralph S. Bauer's own words, both the President and Mrs. Coolidge are "fearfully" in need of complete rest.

"They are cheerful and uncomplaining," Mr. Bauer says, "but, in my opinion, the greatest contribution their hosts of friends in this section can make to them this Summer will be to remain respectfully at a distance and allow the President and his family as much rest as they can take."

Which does NOT mean, of course, that Lynn and Swampscott are going to erect "Keep Out!" or "Detour" signs.

Lynn Keeps Open House

It is meet and proper, Mr. Bauer and other members of the Lynn Chamber of Commerce agree, that the American people should be intensely interested in their President; should take advantage of every opportunity to see him and let him know of their continued interest and undiminished good will.

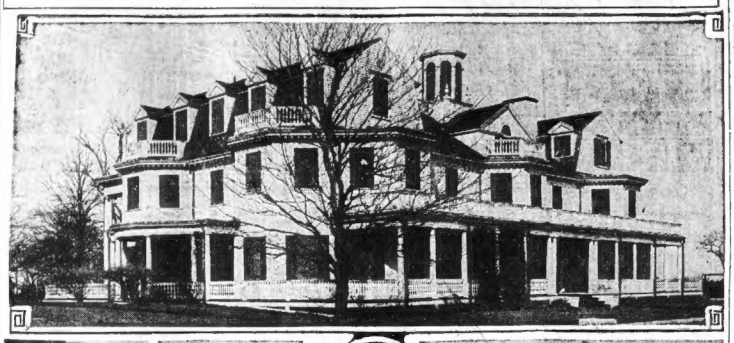
There is no reason in the wide, wide world why New Englanders and their Summer visitors should not visit Lynn and Swampscott this Summer, see and even photograph White Court, if they will, and possibly get an occasional glimpse of one of the most popular of American Presidents and the sweet and unspoiled lady whose charm of manner has endeared her to all Americans and who is both loved and respected in every American home.

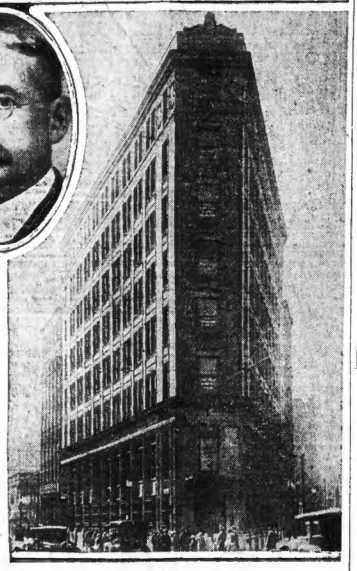
It is very well understood in Lynn that the thousands who will visit the North Shore this Summer solely because the President and Mrs. Coolidge are there will have very little time for Lynn, AS Lynn, but whether that allowance be one, two or twenty minutes, Lynn intends to make the most of it.

Because, fellow-citizens, Lynn has a message, is at the beginning of a tremendously serious and important campaign.

Having made an exhaustive study of the situation, and coming to the conclusion that the future welfare of the city depends upon industrial diversification, the Chamber of Commerce is inaugurating an effort to bring in such industries as the making of clothing, confectionery, jewelry, machinery, electrical appliances and knit goods.

In the popular mind, Lynn is the "Shoe City," or the "Home of the General Electric Company."





No city has ever done more for a Summer visitor to a neighboring community than the enterprising city of Lynn is trying to do for President Coolidge, who comes to Swampscott next month for a very much needed rest. Swampscott was set apart from Lynn in 1852, and "Mother" Lynn has come to her lovely daughter's assistance by providing Mr. Coolidge with offices. Unless you have an appointment with the President it will be idle to visit White Court this Summer before you have first called at the Executive Office in the Security Trust Building, facing Central Square, in Lynn. These offices, on the sixth floor of the tall building shown in the picture, comprise the present home of the Lynn Chamber of Commerce, which has surrendered them to the President's staff free of charge. The picture at the top is one of White Court, the "Summer White House, 1925." Inset are likenesses of three alert officers of the Lynn Chamber: Right to left, President William J. Young, of the William J. Young Machine Company; General Secretary Fred W. Seavey, and John R. Hurlburt, secretary of the Retail Trade Division.

"Wanted: More Industries"

The city's chief industries ARE, of course, and doubtless they will continue to be, the manufacture of women's shoes and the making of electrical machinery. In normal times the West Lynn establishments of the General Electric Company employ about 15,000 persons.

But Lynn wants other industries and more of them, and her Chamber of Commerce, which in the twelve years of an exceptionally busy young life seldom if ever has missed its step, is going after them with a vim and a vigor which presage success.

At the same time it wants to be recorded that Lynn is neither a one-industry nor a two-industry town, however great and overshadowing the shoe and electrical industries may be at the moment.

AS a matter of fact, Lynn at present makes more than TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTY different and distinct commodities!

Compiling a list of them a day or two ago, Mr. John R. Hurlburt, the retail secretary of the organization, discovered that Lynn makes everything "from A to Y."

Lynn makes abdominal supporters, bakers' supplies, centrifugal compressors, dish-washing machinery, electric apparatus, fireproofing material, garden furniture, heels, incandescent lamps, and so on—straight down the alphabet—to umbrellas, ventilators and washing machines.

Makes Everything From "A" to "Y"

The list stops, you see, at "Y," and before the Chamber of Commerce gives the printer the word to go ahead on the booklet it will distribute this year by the thousand it quite naturally wishes to be in a position to proclaim everything "from A to Z."

Which is why the retail secretary wants to hear immediately, if not sooner, from someone who makes yachts, someone else whose line is yardsticks, or someone who turns out yarns. If zinc products, zincographs or zithers are looking for new and advantageous locations, so much the better.

This Chamber of Commerce at Lynn is one of the most alert organizations of the kind in all New England. One thousand members, and every one a Minute Man, ready for public service at a moment's notice.

This is the organization which, when representatives of the President were driven almost to despair in their quest for executive offices not too far from the Summer White House, came forward with the superbly generous offer to move out of its rooms in the Security Trust Building and let the United States move in, free of cost.

It was a public-spirited member of the chamber, the thoughtful Mr. Bauer who has been referred to, who went several steps further in the way of generosity and offered to equip the executive offices with new furniture, also free of cost.

"Information"

There are no office buildings in Swampscott, a residential suburb with a large Summer hotel and many handsome shore estates, and there is no board of trade.

Neither on one side nor the other, as between Lynn and Swampscott, is there even the thought or suspicion of jealousy or envy. The mother town, a busy and bustling industrial community of more than 100,000 people, and the daughter town, a purely residential and resort centre of not more than 9,000 inhabitants, dwell side by side in peace and amity.

The line between them is wholly imaginary. Driving from Lynn into Swampscott is like passing from Boston proper into Roxbury, from Roxbury into Dorchester. The Summer White House will be not much more than a mile and a half from the executive offices in the heart of Lynn.

In addition to covering the roads for miles around with helpful markers, the Lynn Chamber of Commerce will establish an information booth in Washington square, an open triangle upon which face the building of the Lynn Women's Club and the Colonial home of the Oxford Club.

The information bureau will be open seven days in the week, from 9 a. m. until 9 p. m., from June 1 to October 1. Paid attendants will be on duty at all times, and telephone service, guide books, maps and other essentials will be available to all.

This is the chief automobile entrance to Maine, the only route to the Maritime Provinces and a favorite approach to the White Mountains. Its almost countless attractions include Salem, Marblehead, Gloucester, Newburyport, Portsmouth and Portland, many seaside resorts, splendid estates, almost beyond number. It traverses that part of New England which is richest in story and among the richest in history.

What "Vacation" Means

The people of Lynn, acting through Mayor Harland A. McPhetres and one of the most vigorous chambers of commerce in the East, will do everything possible to make the way of the stranger plain, pleasant and profitable.

But no one in Lynn is going to bother or annoy the nation's chief executive, home for a much-needed rest. Nor is anyone in Lynn going to offer to "take you over and introduce you to the President."

So far as Lynn is concerned, the President's vacation is going to be exactly that, "a period of leisure or rest: a holiday."

To the Minute Men of Lynn, the officers and members of the Chamber of Commerce, who are taking this ground with respect to the President and Mrs. Coolidge, the people of Massachusetts and New England as a whole owe a debt of gratitude. For the Lynn organization has acted for all of us, and exactly as the thoughtful amongst us would have acted under like circumstances.

There is not room today for even a "dash" of history, but Lynn was ALWAYS like that, quick and brave and generous in the public interest.

Minute Men? Was Lynn represented at Lexington and Concord and Bunker Hill and elsewhere? The answer may be found in Lynn's old Western Burial Ground, where 105 soldiers of the Revolutionary Army are buried. On the tablets there you read such names as Attwill and Breed and Burrill and Ingalls and Newhall, with many others which have survived until this day and are still the names of men prominent in the industrial and professional life of a community one year older than Boston.

The "Shoe City"?

ONE of the first among them, most decidedly.

The General Electric City?

She shares THAT distinction with Schenectady.

In what manner, then, shall we designate Lynn?

How better, mindful of her generosity, her alertness, her thoughtfulness and her public spirit, as displayed in the present emergency, than to give her a new title, thus:

"Lynn, an AMERICAN city, established and carried on by Minute Men!"
